STEEL STRIKERS WANT U. S. INTERVENTION

Skinny Skribbles

Around and About Town

With C. F. SKIRVIN

An invitation to inspect the water front affords a view of the Laguna Beach sector, and the customary appurtenances. In the days of the Elmer Jahraus fellowship Laguna Beach was my favorite terminal. The topography then was more God than man-made. It had the feel of the natural. Of course being so beautiful it just couldn't remain that way, as beauty attracts wealth and wealth is business. So Laguna Beach, while still offering plenty of the picturesque, has grown into the commercial, and claims to be the most active beach city along the Orange county coast, which might start an argument into which an inland city refuses to become involved.

Harry V. Hanson, rancher and ex-paint salesman, comes in from the Anaheim neighborhood to get the Santa Ana sunlight. He has a slight bronchial affliction. Got his feet wet Memorial day, working in the orchard. That's his story. He's truthful, so don't speculate. Just sympathize.

Wish all the students who are looking for work during the vacation season could find it, but if they do not it is commendable that they are trying to.

It could be a discrimination, blindness, or inability to read, and I do not believe any of the reasons mentioned is the reason. So I am still searching to find out why it is that a fem bus patron is permitted to smoke when a sign "no smoking" has a conspicuous place in the car. So far as I am concerned, the violation matters little, and the smoke is not objectionable. But it makes me think that while all men are created equal, women "ain't."

An ink coach was in town yesterday, painted white, which made it much more welcome than if it was red. We went through the red ink stage for several years. Somehow or other most of the people I talk with prefer to balance the books with the dark color.

Just for fear some suspect might be overlooked, the Soviet high-command throws 22 more military men in a line on an even (See SKINNY, Page 4)

In almost every magazine you see advertisements on how to be eloquent so you can influence people and make friends. I believe if a person likes you you don't have to be eloquent. If a girl don't like a fella, all the candy, flowers, and purty speeches he can shower on her won't make her eyebrow flicker, but if she loves him she'll make a poem out of a kind word from him. My cousin Lobelia went with a fella down home that we all thought was awfully dumb, but she couldn't see it because she loved him. One night she said to him "Do you love me with all your heart and soul?" And he said "Uh-huh." She says "Do you think I'm the most beautiful girl in the world?" And he says "Uh-huh." Then she says "Do you think my lips are like rose petals?" And he said "Uh-huh." Then Lobelia sighed and says "Oh, you can say the most beautiful things!" (Copyright, 1937)

Death of Dr. C. D. Ball Ends 50 Years of Service in Santa Ana

END ARRIVES TODAY FOR PIONEER

Veteran Physician Was Prominent in Civic Activities Here

By BETTY GUILD

Santa Ana's Grand Old Man is no more. Early this morning death came peacefully to Dr. Charles Dexter Ball, for 50 years dean of Orange county's professional men and public-spirited citizens. After a life fruitful in every respect, active until the day before his death, Dr. Ball passed away at his home at 1919 North Broadway.

He was 70 years old, born Oct. 5, 1859, in Stanstead, Quebec, and had lived in Santa Ana since 1887. Outstanding in every phase of activity, he was prominent in politics, in civic affairs, in fraternal and church work, and in the medical world. He was particularly loved for his long and laborious association with the public library, since he was instrumental in its early growth and was president of the board of directors at the time the present building was erected. Dr. Ball continued to serve as board president for 33 years, and upon his resignation in 1934.

G-MEN TACKLE KIDNAP CASE

STONY BROOK, N. Y. (AP)—The federal bureau of investigation, with a noteworthy record of solutions in the Lindbergh, Weyerhaeuser, Stoll, and other spectacular kidnappings, today tackled the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Alice McDonnell Parsons, North Shore Long Island society matron. Even as the federal men swung into action there came reports, quickly denied by the government agents, that a definite contact had been established with the supposed kidnappers.

Outwardly the federal men concentrated on the third-day search of the dense woods and undergrowth northeast of the farm house from which Mrs. Parsons vanished a week ago today. Behind the scenes they veiled their activities with secrecy.

Although the government investigators have been at Stony Brook since last Wednesday night, shortly after a ransom note demanding $25,000 was found tucked in the front seat of the Parsons' car, today marked their formal assumption of control in the investigation.

The Lindbergh kidnaping law, it was pointed out, provides for federal supervision in abduction cases seven days after the commission of the crime on the presumption the victim has been taken across a state line, making it a federal offense.

GRIM REAPER — Death late yesterday called to Rep. William P. Connery, jr., of Massachusetts, as a result of food poisoning with which he was stricken earlier in the day. In the pose above Connery is pictured trying to keep cool at a recent congressional hearing on the wage and hours bill. He was chairman of the house labor committee.

DEATH TAKES CONNERY

Woman Due to Fill His Post as House Labor Committee Chief

WASHINGTON (AP)—The death of Rep. William P. Connery, jr. (D., Mass.), may place a woman in an important government labor post.

Rep. Mary T. Norton (D., N. J.), is entitled by seniority to succeed Connery as chairman of the house labor committee. Mrs. Norton said she was too shocked, however, by Connery's unexpected death yesterday from food poisoning to decide at once whether she would accept the chairmanship.

She would have to relinquish her position as chairman of the District of Columbia committee, which gives her the unofficial title of "mayor of Washington."

If she chooses to retain her present post, the labor chairmanship will pass to Rep. Ramspeck (D., Ga.). It is one of the key offices in congress at present because the committee is considering a broad wage and hour bill.

Connery was co-author of the wage and hour measure. The 48-year-old representative became ill late Monday. His wife started here when she learned of his illness, but was halted en route by news of his death. They have a daughter, 9.

ITALIANS AND NAZIS BACK IN PATROL

Rebels Send Troops to Close Circle Around Besieged Bilbao

By the Associated Press

Germany and Italy formally rejoin the international non-intervention patrol to keep arms and men from reaching Spain today while Spanish insurgents tightened their circle of steel around besieged Bilbao.

Both nations quit the neutral patrol May 31 after their warships had been bombed by Spanish government planes. Now Britain, France, Germany and Italy have evolved a plan to guarantee safety of the patrol ships.

Closing King Gen. Fidel Davila, northern commander of insurgent forces, sent large bodies of troops toward the western heights dominating Bilbao to close his ring around the city.

Advices received at Hendaye, on the Franco-Spanish border, said Basques who wanted to fight to the last man were struggling with anarchist elements who sought to burn the besieged city.

Insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco's radio station at Salamanca reported he expected to capture the Basque capital within 24 hours.

Madrid Shelled Insurgent officers on the front lines admitted, however, it might take several days even to finally encircle Bilbao.

Cable communication with Bilbao was cut off.

Madrid cleaned up after the worst night's shelling it has experienced during the long months of insurgent siege.

Advices received in Perpignan, France, quoted Gen. Jose Miaja, Madrid defense chief, as saying a major aerial counter-offensive was being planned against the insurgents.

5000 KURDISH REBELS SLAIN

ISTANBUL (AP)—The government today announced that more than 5000 Kurdish rebels had been killed or wounded in the suppression of a revolt in the Dersim region of eastern Turkey.

Official documents disclosed that 25,000 troops, equipped with aircraft, were dispatched to stamp out the insurrection which the government said had been under way for three months.

Government reports declared the situation was well in hand although leaders of the rebellion, reported to be Hakek Kijo and his son, were still at liberty. The two leaders were wounded and hiding in the mountains.

100 Cops Ordered On Duty for Film Couple's Nuptials

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Smiling but serious, Jeanette MacDonald refused today to disclose a single detail of the arrangements for the wedding tonight which will make her the bride of Gene Raymond, yellow-haired movie actor.

"I'm superstitious," she said. "It's bad luck to tell those things."

The 11 bridal attendants said they were sworn to secrecy. Hollywood knows it will be a lavish affair, the first big church wedding in the movie colony since that June day, 10 years ago, when Vilma Banky became Mrs. Rod LaRoque, and Beverly Hills police had to call out the reserves.

Los Angeles police have ordered 100 officers to the Wilshire Methodist Episcopal church. They predicted 10,000 people would be massed around the church.

Miss MacDonald's wedding is scheduled to start at 9 o'clock.

NAME 5 FLOOD BOND CHIEFS

Leaders Will Organize Citizens to Promote Water Campaign

Five prominent Orange county citizens were named today to promote the interests of the county's $2,500,000 water bond election set for July 27.

As announced exclusively in The Journal several days ago, Arthur J. McFadden, president of the State chamber of commerce and prominent Santa Ana agriculturist, will be chairman of the citizens' committee.

The four other members named today are Dian R. Gardner, Orange, president of the farm bureau; Walter Humphrey, Fullerton, member of the Metropolitan Water district board of directors; Willis H. Warner, Huntington Beach, chairman of the Orange County Water district board, and P. A. Palmer, Lido Isle.

Each of the five men represents one of the supervisory districts in the county. Each will build his own organization of citizens to help promote the bond issue, the success of which means Orange county will get $13,000,000 from the government to construct eight flood control and water conservation dams.

Observers throughout the county freely predict that the bonds will carry. They point out that the county will get a $15,000,000 water program for an expenditure of but $2,500,000.

Allotment Approved Associated Press dispatches to The Journal this week announced that in Washington, D. C., the house appropriations committee has recommended $4,000,000 for each of the first three years of construction work on the Orange county program, and a million dollars the fourth year, making a grand total of $13,000,000.

Word received by The Journal yesterday from Congressman Harry Sheppard announced that he has been assured of a governmental appropriation of from $200,000 to $300,000 or whatever is necessary to complete final surveys on the water program. This money, however, he said, will not be made available unless Orange county votes the bond issue.

Bulgaria Queen Bears Son Today

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP)—Queen Giovanna, wife of King Boris, gave birth to a son today who may some day rule Bulgaria, and military garrisons throughout the land fired salutes of 100 guns. There would have been only 21 for a girl.

The mother and the little crown prince were reported in excellent health. Premier George Kiosselevanov witnessed the birth as the constitution requires.

SPLIT COMES OVER COURT ARGUMENT

Letter Urges Clubs to Drop Leader's Name In Their Titles

Congressman Harry Sheppard, elected from Orange, Riverside and San Bernardino counties on a Townsend plan program, today announced he has broken with Dr. F. E. Townsend, originator of the plan, because of the latter's attacks upon the President's supreme court plan.

He urged members of Townsend clubs here to drop Dr. Townsend's name and call themselves General Welfare clubs to support the general welfare bill now before congress and embodying the Townsend plan.

Court Issue In a letter to clubs here, Congressman Sheppard declared Dr. Townsend had announced he would work to defeat any member of congress who voted for the supreme court change, and that the announcement had nearly killed the chances of enacting the old age pension plan.

"In my humble opinion the general welfare act is greater than any individual or group of individuals, and I feel that none of us can permit individuals or groups to impede the progress of the greatest piece of legislation that has ever been proposed," Sheppard said.

Uproar in Congress Sheppard said he and other members of the Townsend steering committee had secured 90 signatures of the more reluctant congressmen to discharge the Townsend bill from the ways and means committee for a hearing and were planning to move in later with the Townsend bloc to get the required 218 signatures.

When news reports of Dr. Townsend's challenge on the supreme court plan reached congress, it was thrown into an uproar and many of the signers asked to (See SHEPPARD, Page 2)

'Me Drink 2 Quarts a Day? Nonsense,' Says Film Comic

RIVERSIDE (AP)—Bulb-nosed, raucous-voiced W. C. Fields, one of the screen's top-flight comedians, roared a denial today to charges he drank two quarts of whisky a day.

"Nonsense! It's a lie," shouted Fields in answer to statements of Dr. Jesse Citron that the actor's excessive drinking made his hospital case hard to handle. "Why, I never drank two quarts a day, not even in the good old days. Right now, I'm a teetotaler."

It was Fields' half of the innings as he came into Judge O. K. Morton's court to defend himself in a $12,000 medical fees suit brought by Dr. Citron, who ministered to him for a month last year when the actor was critically ill.

CAPISTRANO MAN KILLED

Two Others Die in Car Accident Yesterday Near San Clemente

Two men were killed instantly and a third sustained fatal injuries in what San Diego officials termed a "useless" accident south of San Clemente at 4 p. m. yesterday. One of the victims was Frank Moore of Capistrano.

Today a fourth principal in the tragedy faces homicide charges. Ernest E. Gill, 60, well known rancher from San Mateo, immediately south of San Clemente, and his son, Alexander Gill, 29, were instantly killed when struck by a car reported driven by Walter Awe, 34, of Reseda, as they were changing a tire beside the highway.

Frank Moore, 39, Capistrano, truck driver for an oil company, who had stopped to aid the pair in changing the tire, was taken to the local hospital with a broken pelvis, broken arm and leg, fractured ribs, internal injuries and severe pavement burns. He died at 12:15 p. m. today.

San Diego coroner's attaches said that Awe's car struck the elder Gill, carrying him more than 80 feet and it was thought a trailer attached to the machine struck young Gill and Moore. The Gill car, they said, was parked 41 inches off the highway and there was "no reason for the accident."

Awe is held on negligent homicide charges in San Diego and was to be arraigned today, it was reported. Accompanying him were C. A. Garner and A. H. Cravens, both of Reseda.

counter claim against Dr. Citron for $25,000, alleging that a sleep-producing drug not recognized by the American Medical society was used. Fields contends $1000 would have been a fair fee for Dr. Citron's service, but the physician said his bill for $12,000 was arrived at on the basis of one-twelfth of Fields' annual income from the movies. He testified the comedian earned $144,000 annually and had an accumulated surplus of approximately $700,000.

The doctor said that when he took Fields' case the actor was drinking two quarts of whisky a day, but that the amount was cut to a few ounces daily.

TENSION IN MILL TOWNS HEIGHTENS

Back-to-Job Movement Stalemated By Bomb Blast in Johnstown

WASHINGTON (AP)—Phillip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said today he would ask Secretary Perkins for federal intervention in the steel strike.

By the Associated Press Back-to-work movement, designed to re-open the strike sieged mills of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company, ended inconclusively today as a dynamite explosion heightened the tension on another front in the big steel strike area.

A similar back-to-work move in Detroit, however, gained momentum in some General Motors Corporation plants, with the settlement of a walkout that has kept 12,000 employees of the Ternstedt Manufacturing Company of Detroit idle since June 7.

Propose Election The Steel Workers Organizing Committee proposed to the Bethlehem Steel Corporation that an election be held at the strikebound Cambria works in Johnstown, Pa., to determine whether John L. Lewis' steel union will represent the employees in collective bargaining.

Pittsburgh headquarters of the union announced a telegram had been sent to Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem, making the proposal. The union stipulated that if the union wins the election, the company should agree to a written labor contract—the prime point at which individual steel companies have balked.

Plan Vetoed Frank Purnell, president of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube, vetoed—for the moment, at least—the back-to-work plan submitted by Henry L. Thomas, who said he was a spokesman for 10,000 non-

SUNDQUIST TO LEAD LIONS

E. M. Sundquist, Santa Ana, was named president of the Orange County Council of Lions clubs at the monthly meeting in Orange American Legion hall last night.

Elected to serve with Sundquist for the coming year were Herb Eldred, Anaheim, vice president, and A. L. Pinkley, Costa Mesa, secretary-treasurer. Sundquist replaces John Gibson, Laguna Beach, as president.

Featuring the evening was discussion of plans for the annual barbecue for all Lions clubs, held each August in Anaheim city park. Members of the council last night voted to attend. Members of the Anaheim club will be hosts. Gibson presided at a business meeting, which was followed by a program which included tap dances by Mary Ann Lenz, Carol Jeanne Harms and Ralph Gulledge and an instrumental trio composed of Barbara Robinson, Blanche Patton and Mrs. Margaret Ockels.

STATE PLEDGES AID TO SELF-HELP UNITS FOR ANOTHER YEAR

PREDICTION IS MADE BY OFFICIAL

Orange County Has 2000 Persons Affected By Cooperative Plan

State aid for self-help cooperatives in Orange county will be continued during the next fiscal year.

This prediction was made today by Victor Schock, state field advisor for the cooperatives, who was in Orange county contacting officials of the cooperatives.

Orange county is vitally concerned in the new state program, inasmuch as this county has a fourth of the entire membership of the state in self-help activities.

About 2000 persons are interested in the program in this county. There are units in practically every community.

On Efficient Basis

The state advisor said it is his belief that the same program, launched on April 1, will be continued throughout the next fiscal year, which starts July 1.

Self-help cooperatives are on the most efficient basis now they have ever been, he said. All persons eligible for city, county or state aid and not recipients of such aid, are eligible to join the self-help program.

Budgets now are established for the workers in self-help units. They need not work any certain number of hours, but to be active members and share in the profits, they must put in 64 hours a month. Budgets are based on the number of persons in the family, and are about 15 per cent higher than SRA budgets. Active members draw cash and commodities. The more a member produces, the more his share in the profits amounts to. Goods are distributed from a central warehouse in Los Angeles.

Borrow From State

Units can borrow money from the state fund with which to launch and finance projects. They can pay the money back out of earnings. They are given book credits for their surpluses, disposed of by the state.

It is the intention of the cooperatives to produce everything a family needs to live comfortably, with the exception of imported items such as coffee and tea. Goods not produced in this county are secured from the central warehouse.

Orange county units now are producing agricultural crops of various kinds, olive oil, canned goods of every description, jellies, etc. They operate shoe shops, garages, transportation projects, fire-wood projects, poultry ranches, dairies, and clothing projects.

FAILED TO APPEAR

Committed to the county jail yesterday because of failure to appear at the specified time in court were Opal Franklin, 24, of 125 Virginia avenue, Buena Park; and Alfred Lopera, 18, of 1322 Logan street, Santa Ana.

NONAGENARIAN Mrs. Julia Ett Smith

Mrs. Julia Ett Smith, above, mother of a well-known Orange county family, celebrated her 90th birthday Saturday and was entertained Sunday at Anaheim park with a family picnic which reunited all but one of her sons and daughters.

Only member of the family not present was Harry Smith, a son of Kinsley, Kas., who was unable to attend. Two other sons, C. J. Smith of Wichita, Kas., and E. H. Smith of Kinsley, Kas., attended, as well as sons and daughters living in Orange county.

These included Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Weitenman of Anaheim, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Stout of Anaheim, Dr. and Mrs. C. N. Mosher of Santa Ana, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Smith of Santa Ana, Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Smith of Santa Ana.

Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Turton of Santa Ana, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Echols of Santa Ana and their son and daughter, Rabun and Verna, and Miss Dorothy Renfro. Grandchildren attending included Helen, Meriba and Eula Smith of Kinsley, Kas., and Laurence Smith of Santa Ana.

scratched their names from the petition, reported Sheppard.

He said they allowed their names to remain on promise that Dr. Townsend would not make further attacks.

Quotes Doctor

Sheppard said Dr. Townsend was asked in his presence:

"Doctor, do you consider the supreme court issue of more importance to the old people of this county than you do successful enactment of the general welfare act, H. R. 4199?"

"I certainly do," he quoted Dr. Townsend as replying.

Sheppard said he has chosen to stay with the old age pension bill, even though it means a split with its originator.

Sheppard will be in Riverside July 3 and 4 and has invited Townsend to meet him there.

PIONEER LOCAL WOMAN DIES

One of two last remaining members of one of the oldest families in Southern California will be buried in the old Yorba cemetery tomorrow when rites will be held for Virginia Lugo de Fuentez, 82, who died Monday evening at her home in Olive.

A sister, Emelda Rozas, of San Juan, Benito county, now is the only survivor of the famed Lugo family, which figured greatly in early history of the state and county.

Mrs. Fuentez is survived by her husband, Joe Fuentez, to whom she had been married 64 years. Fuentez long has been known as one of the oldest residents of the Orange and Olive districts, having worked for Jotham Bixby, sr., in this territory for the past 67 years.

Also surviving are five children, Mrs. Virginia Miller, Los Angeles; Juan C. Fuentez, Huntington Park; Manuel Fuentez, Ocean-side; Mrs. Flora P. Woods, Sacramento, and Mrs. Emelda F. Buell, Orange. Also surviving are 13 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Rites will be held at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning from St. Boniface Catholic church, in Anaheim, with recitation of the Rosary at 7:30 p. m. today.

BYRNES PLEADS RELIEF LETUP

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Senator Byrnes (D., S. C.) appealed to the senate today to require local communities to provide 40 per cent of relief projects costs.

"The emergency that caused us to give a lump sum for relief without restriction on how it was to be spent has passed," he said.

Byrnes sought adoption of a committee amendment to the $1,500,000,000 relief appropriation bill which would require a 40 per cent contribution by sponsors of relief projects except when they demonstrated inability to pay that amount.

Before beginning debate on the proposal the senate approved two minor changes in the amendment. One would permit local sponsors to provide materials and services as part of their contribution.

"We may as well be frank," Byrnes told the senate. "Recovery has taken place."

COURT ACQUITS MRS. HILL

A feminine fistic battle, discussed from all angles in Judge Kenneth Morrison's court today, brought a verdict of not guilty to the defending contestant.

Mrs. Ruth Hanley, 1831 West Eighth street, whose husband is serving a six-month sentence for striking a process server, caused Mrs. Evelyn Hill of Huntington Beach to be haled into court on a charge of assault and battery and disturbing the peace.

Testimony revealed that in an argument at her home, Mrs. Hanley had invited Mrs. Hill to make good her alleged threat that she would like to make use of her right fist. A scuffle resulted, and the damage included a pair of broken glasses.

Both claimed the other had struck the first blow. Judge Morrison decided that neither could prove her point. The result: Not guilty on both counts.

Senator Chavez Poisoned by Food

WASHINGTON, (AP) — Senator Chavez (D., N.M.) was in the Naval hospital today, suffering from food poisoning similar to that which caused the death yesterday of Representative Conery (D., Mass.).

Chavez was stricken suddenly in his office with nausea, chills, and a high fever, and the capitol physician, Dr. George W. Calver, immediately ordered him to the hospital. His condition today was reported much improved, and his son, Dennis Chavez, jr., said the senator apparently was in no danger.

Trash Fire Causes $300 in Damage

A trash fire igniting a pile of lumber at 1230 South Birch street yesterday caused a property loss of $300 to the owner, J. R. Santrom. Further damage was prevented when the fire was extinguished by the fire department.

A second blaze brought a call to the fire department when a discarded cigaret ignited a pile of trash near the First Church of Christ, Scientist at 920 North Main street. The blaze caused no damage.

AMBITIONS FOR HIM

"What are you studying now?" fondly asked the new-rich mother of her youngest son.

"We have just begun the study of molecules," he answered.

For a moment she looked blank; then a gleam of interest showed in her eyes. "I hope you will be very attentive and practice constantly," she exclaimed eagerly. "I tried to get your father to wear one, but he couldn't keep it in his eye."

MORE ABOUT DR. BALL

1935, the position was filled by his son, Dr. John Ball.

He served as county physician for seven years and formerly served two terms on the city board of education.

A charter member of the Orange County Medical association, founded in 1889, he served as secretary for the first three years, and as president in 1893. He was also a charter member of the Southern California Medical society, founded in 1911, belonged to the California Medical society, and was a fellow in the American Medical association. He was a graduate of Stanstead Wesleyan college, Bishops college in Montreal and McGill university.

Dr. Ball was an ardent Republican, serving as delegate to the Republican national convention in Chicago in 1920, and as assemblyman for the 76th district in 1923-24, and 1927-28.

Medical Veteran

He served on the Southern California exemption board No. 1 throughout the World war, of which he was a medical veteran, and was member of the United States pension examining board for more than 20 years.

Orange county history was of vital interest to Dr. Ball, who aided in collecting and preserving it by his association with the Orange and was member of the Society of the American Revolution, through descent from Silas Ball, surgeon of the Hampshire Regiment, Mass.

Order of Odd Fellows, he was also prominently affiliated with Masonry, belonging to Santa Ana lodge No. 241, F. and A. M., the Royal Arch Masons, Knights Templar, and Al Malakia Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S. at Los Angeles.

Bank Director

Among the outstanding business activities with which he was associated were directorship in the First National bank of Santa Ana, president of the Santa Ana Manufacturing company, directorship in the California Crate company, and presidency of the Abstract and Title Guaranty company for more than a third of a century.

Dr. Ball and his family were members of the Methodist Episcopal church here.

He is survived by his wife, the former Emma L. Rankin, to whom he was married in 1889; three sons, Charles Field Ball, prominent Millwright, and Dr. John Ball, both of whom were associated with their father's practice in Santa Ana; and one daughter, Emma Arvilla (Mrs. Paul Witmer), who is also a resident of Santa Ana.

His grandchildren include Margaret Elizabeth, Barbara Arvilla and Charles Field Ball, jr., of Milwaukee; Dexter Taber, Robert Edward and Donald Rankin Ball; Mary and John Ball, jr.; James Philip, Virginia and Paul Benjamin Witmer, jr., all of Santa Ana.

Funeral services will be announced later by Smith and Tutill.

Blasts Destroy Powder Plants

striking steel workers in the Mahoning valley.

Purcell declined to give the workers' delegation any answer except that he would move "as rapidly as possible" to obtain promises of "protection" from civil authorities for men who want to go back to work.

He would not attempt a reopening, he said, until he had received such assurances. The mills have been idle for three weeks.

At Warren, O., another tense point in the Mahoning valley steel area, Judge Lynn B. Griffith ordered the Republic Steel company to bring into court any records showing how much has been spent for machine-guns, tear-gas bombs, labor "spies" and company unions.

The judge made his ruling at the start of the third day hearing on Republics petition for an injunction to curtail picketing.

At Ambridge, Pa., a spokesman for an American Federation of labor union asserted in a protest to President Roosevelt and Attorney General Homer Cummings that C. I. O. pickets prevented A. F. of L. workers from returning to their jobs.

The protest followed yesterday's clash at Ambridge, when scores were beaten in a free-for-all between 500 C. I. O. pickets and 50 A. F. of L. members attempting a back-to-work movement.

On the eastern front of the strike "war" the explosion of Johnstown, Pa., sent scores of terror-stricken residents tumbling from their beds into the streets before dawn today.

A dynamite bomb hurled from a speeding sedan ripped up a concrete sidewalk and shattered several windows at the strike-beset Gaultier plant of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation. The blast, near the plant gate, broke windows in nearby homes.

DEMOCRATS TO HEAR FIGHT

A big meeting of Orange county Democrats planned for next Tuesday night will start with a battle. But it won't be a battle of the brawns. It will be the fight for the heavyweight championship between Joe Louis and James Braddock.

Because the meeting scheduled by the Orange county unit of the California Assembly of Democrats comes at the same time as the boxing battle, arrangements have been made to install a radio in the auditorium of the Willard Junior High school for the event, so that the crowd can hear the broadcast of the battle prior to the meeting.

Hill and Hill, Santa Ana radio dealers, will install a radio for the Democrats, it was announced today.

In addition to a group of prominent California Democrats scheduled to address the meeting, a program of musical entertainment will be offered, it was announced by Chester I. Dale, general chairman of the assembly. Joe Peterson will be in charge of the musical numbers by John Stout, popular Orange violinist, and by Stanley Kurtz, El Modena vocalist.

General discussion of Democratic problems will feature the meeting, expected to attract a crowd of several hundred. The assembly was organized to unify efforts in electing a Democratic governor next year.

BOARD SCORES 'TAX RACKET'

County supervisors today were pondering means to stop what they characterized as a "tax racket" after cancelling delinquent taxes on a parcel of property sold to the city of Fullerton in 1931. The taxes amounted to $900.

It was explained that the city bought the property after taxes had been assessed but before they became delinquent. The cloud on the title was not discovered until recently, when the city was sent a delinquent tax bill.

Supervisor N. E. West said there is a growing tendency for property owners to sell tax delinquent property to cities at a low figure because of the back taxes, knowing that the county must cancel taxes on property owned by cities.

As a result, West said, the county actually is helping cities in several cases to buy land.

Kansas usually has more of both hogs and cattle than of human inhabitants.

BIRDS WAR ON CHILDREN Officer Probes War Cause

DR. ROYAL J. DYE, above, former missionary to Africa, will speak in the First Methodist church Sunday evening, opening the annual summer program of union services.

Children menaced by blackbirds! Police yesterday were summoned by a worried mother who complained that blackbirds were swooping down at her children and trying to pick their eyes.

Officer Hunter Leach went to the source of trouble at 1618 West Third street and, upon investigation, assured the mother, Mrs. L. E. Brown, that the agitated birds were probably more worried than she.

A fledgling had fallen from a nest in the tree on the parking, and older birds were doing their best to distract attention from it. Between attempts to scare the children away they were feeding the baby blackbird and attempting to lead it to shelter.

Officer Leach decided their course of action was justified.

HITCH-HIKER AND BABE FIND AID

CHICAGO, (AP) — Hitch-hiking around the country with his year-old son in his arms, and searching for a job, John F. Willey, 23, of Des Moines, Iowa, today termed Chicago "a swell city."

Father and son were beginning their career here with a new-found $15 nest egg.

Last night Willey, carrying a suitcase and the sleepy boy, Charles, whose first birthday is tomorrow, approached a Loop traffic policeman and asked for shelter and food.

After-the-theater crowds heard Willey tell the policeman his wife, Mrs. Lillian Willey, 22, died last March.

"I couldn't take care of my son properly," he relates, "because I couldn't find work in Des Moines and I was on relief."

Sympathetic listeners took up a $15 collection.

The church he helped establish at Bolenge is larger today than any church of his communion in this country.

Unable now to return to Africa as a missionary, Dr. Dye has gone across the country addressing conventions, churches and other groups under the auspices of the United Christian Missionary society of Indianapolis, Ind., and is in demand as an interesting speaker.

It's President Chet Page now! Page was elected presiding officer of the Civitan service club at their regular meeting held yesterday. He will serve a six-months term.

Other officers named for the organization were Dr. Herbert T. Stroebein, first vice-president; Everett Parks, second vice-president; Stanley Nelson, treasurer; Don Harwood, secretary, and Stanley Morgan, sergeant-at-arms.

Approves Injury Claim Settlement

Presiding Superior Judge H. G. Ames yesterday authorized Ralph M. Thurman to accept $200 from an insurance company in settlement of claims of his two daughters, Miss Elta Elma Thurman, 20, and Miss Eva Leona Thurman, 19, over injuries suffered in an auto accident.

The accident involved Verne Adams, who did not admit responsibility, according to Thurman's petition.

WORLD'S FIRST WOMAN 'CHUTE JUMPER TO ATTEND AIR SHOW

'DOLL GIRL' TO BE S. A. GUEST

Tiny Broadwick Once Barnstormed With Glenn Martin

Events planned for Santa Ana's great air show next Sunday at the Martin Airport continued to pile up with surprising frequency today. Latest of the attractions at the big air event announced today will be the appearance of Tiny Broadwick, the world-famous "Doll Girl" of the Broadwick Trio of a quarter-century ago.

Tiny Broadwick achieved world-wide distinction by becoming the world's first woman parachute jumper.

Worked with Martin She barnstormed with Glenn L. Martin throughout the country, doing exhibition work and "chute jumping" when she was at the height of her fame. She was about 14 years old at the time.

Her father, Charles Broadwick, is credited with the invention of the present type of parachute and he also was associated with Glenn Martin at one time. Tiny made her first appearance with her father at the age of 6, when he was making "chute jumps" from hot-air balloons. When she was 13 years old, Tiny was test-jumping her father's experimental "chutes" and doing stunt and exhibition flying throughout the country.

To Appear Here She was at the Cabrillo pier to wish Glenn Martin happy landings on his twenty-fifth anniversary hop to Catalina. She will be at the local airport as a guest of the chamber of commerce, which is sponsoring the big air show.

Final details of the all-day show will be completed by members of the chamber aviation committee at a meeting scheduled for 4 p. m. tomorrow. Members of the committee are Dale Deckert, chairman, E. Vilas Childers, Clinton Matzen, Leroy Burns, John Lutz, Floyd Martin, Plummer Bruns, William Penn, Oliver Lindemeyer, William Jerome, Jr., Paul Rogers, Adolph Kelsey, D. S. Richards, Frank Harrington, John Knox, Jr.

CAMERA CLUB MEETING Orange County Camera club will hold its regular monthly meeting and exhibition of prints tomorrow night at the Santa Ana Community Players barn, it was announced today.

HALL TO JOIN 'BOYS' STATE'

John Allen Hall, 19-year-old Santa Ana High school senior, has been chosen to attend the new school in government to be known as "Boys' State" in Sacramento, June 19 to 27, the American Legion post No. 131 announced today.

Hall will join 500 other youths from all parts of the state in a session of training in government to be conducted by the state American Legion at the highway patrol training school in the capitol. This is the first year of the new training course.

During DeMolay day, when boys assumed the roles of city officers, Hall was detective sergeant here. Shortly afterward he was responsible for the arrest and conviction in a car rifting case for which he may receive a reward. Hall lives at 617 South Garney.

$126,000 PLANE TO SHOW HERE

An airplane which cost $126,000 to build will be on display at the big Santa Ana air show Sunday at the Martin Airport, it was announced today by Dale Deckert, chamber of commerce of committee head in charge of the event.

It is a Douglas sleeper, owned by the American Airlines, Johnny Martin, Santa Ana aviator and American Airlines pilot, will fly the ship to Santa Ana. Co-pilot on the ship will be Bill Cheney, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Cheney, 1101 South Ross street.

The big plane, which sleeps 14 passengers, is being sent to Santa Ana's air show through the courtesy of C. R. Smith, president of the airline. The plane is the same kind that Johnny Martin flies on his regular Los Angeles-Ft. Worth run.

Members of the committee in charge of the air show were jubilant over the announcement that the big plane will come to the air show. It will be one of the outstanding attractions of the show, expected to attract a crowd of 30,000 persons.

COUNTY IN NEW TAX DISTRICT

California is being cut up again. This time it is to divide the state into five districts for the state board of equalization. There have been only four since the board was inaugurated in 1879.

The proposal is under terms of constitutional amendment 4 passed by the legislature, and today awaiting the signature of Governor Frank F. Merriam. The new set-up must be proved by the people of the state and will come to a vote in the regular election of Nov. 1938.

The proposal will put Los Angeles in a district by itself, since that county contributes more than 45 per cent of the taxes administered by the board.

Santa Barbara and Ventura counties, now in the fourth district, will be transferred to the second district.

The remaining counties in the fourth district now, Orange, Riverside, Imperial, San Bernardino, and San Diego, will comprise the new, or fifth district.

Fanchon Martinson Gets Mills Degree

Miss Fanchon Martinson, Santa Ana student at Mills college for women near Oakland, has just received her master's of arts degree from that institution, it was learned here today.

Miss Martinson also was awarded a diploma from the nursery school.

ASK SALARY BILL OKED

LOS ANGELES, (AP)—Gov. Frank Merriam was urged to sign a bill that would provide $3,000,000 for increasing salaries and wages of state employees in the lower brackets in a resolution adopted by the state personnel board.

VETERANS UNIT SETS RECORD

Holding their final business meeting of the six-months term which ends June 30, officers of Calumit camp of the United Spanish War Veterans last night reported 208 members, the highest number which the camp has ever had.

Reports were given and invitations accepted to attend receptions for departmental officers as follows: Los Angeles camp and auxiliary, June 16, in Los Angeles; Ensign Bagley camp and auxiliary, June 25, at Pasadena; Charles E. Clark camp and auxiliary, June 29, at Inglewood; Hollywood camp and auxiliary, July 1, at Hollywood.

Junior Vice Commander Albert P. Dresser was in his station last night after a month's vacation trip.

The monthly pot-luck dinner on June 22 and the next meeting of the auxiliary sewing circle at Hillcrest park, Fullerton, with Mrs. Zephra Pearson as hostess, were announced.

Salary Increase Denied Dr. Russell

Dr. Edward Lee Russell, who serves both the county hospital and the county juvenile department, won't get the raise in salary he asked for the coming year.

Supervisors, who were asked a month ago to raise his salary from its present figure of $2700 a year on reports that Dr. Russell had been offered another position, said yesterday they will not grant the raise.

They reported the proffered position was as health officer of Ventura county, where Dr. Charles Wylie, formerly of the Los Angeles county hospital staff, has been given the appointment at $2500 a year.

A letter from the Fourth District Parent-Teacher association was received by the board yesterday expressing appreciation of Dr. Russell's work.

Townsend News, Views

By
WALTER R. ROBB

The Townsend Time address over KVOE last Monday evening was made by Capt. Russell R. Hand, and it was a stirring appeal to all Townsends to remain loyal to Dr. Townsend in the present crisis in the Townsend movement. Capt. Hand quoted from a speech made by George Washington, who sought to rally his followers in support of popular government by the people. Hand pointed out that if Dr. Townsend is wrong in his stand against the supreme court reorganization bill, then George Washington was also wrong as both have taken practically the same attitude in respect to maintaining the democratic order.

In contrast to this appeal of Capt. Hand for all Townsends to rally back to Dr. Townsend, is the statement of Representative Harry R. Sheppard and a group of the general welfare act steering committee, who have gone on record in a series of resolutions in opposition to the continued leadership of Dr. Townsend in the movement sponsoring the enactment into law of the Townsend plan principles. Sheppard issued a letter out of Washington last Thursday, which is now finding its way into the hands of Townsend club officials, which indicates that he has definitely broken with the doctor. It is a mimeographed letter which Sheppard explains was necessary because of his sending a copy to every Townsend club of the 19th district. He explains his antagonism to the Townsend plan founder on the grounds that the doctor continued efforts to the present administration by opposing the President's supreme court reorganization bill is hindering progress in getting signatures on the petition to discharge the ways and means committee.

Representative Sheppard goes even so far as to ask the Townsend clubs of America and particularly those of the 19th district to desert the doctor, and change their names from that of Townsend clubs, to that of General Welfare clubs. He makes this appeal through the medium of quoting in his letter a resolution passed by the general welfare act steering committee, which the writer also quotes in tonight's column, along with an opening introduction to the resolution which is of Sheppard's personal framing. I quote from his letter:

"There was a meeting yesterday (the letter is dated June 9 in Washington) of the steering committee at which were passed the following resolutions and they are hereby quoted.

"That hereafter the Townsend congressional steering committee in the house be known as the general welfare steering committee, and that an appeal be made to Townsend clubs throughout the United States to change their names to General Welfare clubs, and that a further appeal be made to those factions estranged by previous partisan politics in the past from the Townsend organization to cooperate under a common, nonpartisan front for a national old-age pension and general welfare, and that the general welfare organization be recognized for what it is—a great humanitarian movement not concerned with personalities, individualities or political partisanship.

"That it was the general consensus of opinion of those present that J. W. Brinton, resigned general manager of the Townsend organization, and Gilmour Young, national secretary, be asked to come to Washington for a conference with the committee concerning past financial activities of the organization and Dr. Townsend."

There is much more to the letter which tonight's column does not have the space to quote. The writer thought, however, that the Townsends who do not attend the clubs should have the privilege of reading the above excerpts from Representative Sheppard's letter to the Townsend clubs of the 19th district. Sheppard's desertion of Dr. Townsend and his appeal to the Townsend clubs to do the same will likely shock all true Townsends as it did the writer. It places the Townsend clubs in the position of having to choose between the leadership of their beloved Dr. Frances E. Townsend and that of Congressman Sheppard and the rest of the congressional steering committee. The writer believes that the majority of the Townsend clubs and their membership will stick by the doctor and he expects that Representative Sheppard will be mightily censured by the Townsend organization, particularly in the 19th California district.

Doubtless the stand taken by the doctor in a public way against President Roosevelt's attempt to reorganize the judicial branch of government has estranged some Democratic congressmen from signing the petition to give a hearing to the Townsend bill. This is what Congressman Sheppard contends. But the writer wonders why Sheppard's criticism is all against Doctor Townsend and none against the President. If Dr. Townsend has made strategic errors and has hindered somewhat the getting of signatures on the Townsend bill petition it is not to be wondered at, considering the type and volume of antagonism which has been encountered. But let every Townsend remember, including Representative Sheppard, that it was the Roosevelt administration which adopted the procedure of rules in congress making 218 signatures on the Townsend petition necessary.

DEMOCRATIC POW-WOW IS SCHEDULED

F. D. R. Will Confer With 400 Congressmen at June 25 Outing

WASHINGTON. (AP)—President Roosevelt will confer with more than 400 Democratic congressmen about general legislative problems during an outing at secluded Jefferson Island club in Chesapeake bay, beginning June 25.

This was announced today by the White House after the President accepted an invitation to spend three days at the Democratic Fish and Gun club. The invitation was extended by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the majority leader, who is president.

"Purely An Outing" While Robinson said it would be "purely an outing" with opportunities afforded for informal discussions, the White House said the President would take the opportunity to consult with the entire Democratic contingent in congress on legislative or any other problems they wished to bring up.

Stephen O. Early, secretary to the President, said the exclusive club, near Annapolis, Md., would serve as a fine substitute for the limited facilities in Washington for such a large group pow-wow.

He explained there were 407 Democratic members of the senate and house and the club could accommodate only 21 in its sleeping quarters. To get around this, Early said Senator Robinson drew names out of a hat, and invited one-third of the entire group to visit the island each day.

Perkins Left Out Early said cabinet members would be included, but since it was exclusively a stag affair, Secretary Perkins would not be invited.

Heads of bureau agencies having congressional problems will be on hand, including Harry L. Hopkins, Works Progress administrator, who probably will take up relief bill difficulties.

The President will motor to Annapolis the afternoon of June 24. He will board the yacht Potomac and transfer to a small boat about two miles from the island to go ashore next morning.

MORE BY SKINNY

(Continued From Page 1) range with bullets. I like to welcome the coming morn, but I prefer to do so in America. You have a much better chance of doing an encore.

Fred Newcomb, Jr., who has had charge of the Tournament of Lights program for the past two years, tells me this year he has yielded the illuminating publicity to Sam Meyer, who proposes to high-brow the edition into the book paper class, with some 60 or more pages of illustrations and information about the event which has made the Orange county coast line famous. What Dr. Huston does to the highway Sam is going to do to the water front. There will be plenty of light. And say, Sam, when you invite the newspaper boys down to the pre-tournament banquet, try and find an invitation my size. Then send it to me.

It has long been a political tradition to "point with pride" to party accomplishments, but no ruler is being used as an index by the senate judiciary committee to its report on the proposed supreme court change. So, being on the opposite side of the party fence, I'll skip it.

Official time company hours have been changed from 8 to 4 to 8:30 and 4:30, but the titles will be good any business day.

Cotton Mather says one of his missing a pair of gold rimmed eye-glasses which were left on his desk at the Santa Ana Building and Loan association about a week ago. He would be pleased to have the owner recover the property. I am sure that the owner feels the same way Cotton does about it, and may this little notice be seen by the party who needs the glasses. That's all I can do about it.

Earl Morrow reports something wrong on the water front. Two days fishing and a little fish to show for his skill and patience. The compensation for time consumed is inadequate. Will the secret committee please investigate.

Joe Steele was in the money last Tuesday. He had "Mike" Koepfel, of Los Angeles, bring it to him. "Mike" is a numismatist. We are all numismatists more or less, "Mike" considerably more, as he knows his money. Old coins are his hobby, and he'll take you for a ride into the archives of coin scarcity. Koepfel addressed a service club and brought coin antiques with him worth considerably more than face value. A few cents could be worth many hundreds of dollars, if you only knew it. Otherwise it would only be worth a few cents to you. Collection of coins is an interesting and profitable business if you know your money. I've been helping Joe fill up a penny board, and it is about the slowest job I ever got into. He looks at 'em and rejects most of my contributions just because of a single letter. Don't see why he has to be so particular. They all look alike to me.

Tomorrow this column will have more to say on this subject.

BOY IN MYSTERY.—Mrs. Anna Kupryanova, reputed former Russian countess, and her son, Roy (standing, above) have lived at the home of Mrs. Alice Parsons, missing Stony Brook, N. Y., heiress, for some years, authorities have learned. Mrs. Kupryanova has been questioned by authorities for information concerning circumstances preceding Mrs. Parsons' disappearance. Some published reports said Mrs. Parsons had been considering adoption of the boy.

TO TEST PLANE FLIGHT AIDE

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Army, navy and department of air commerce officials will observe an airplane test flight from Los Angeles to Oakland this week, in which a flight recorder, invention of Dr. Samuel Spitz, will chart a transport's continuous progress on a translucent map situated at Union Air Terminal, Burbank.

Shortwave radio impulses from a portable transmitter in the plane move lights on the big map, which is operated by a maze of powerful tubes, coils and wires. Dr. Spitz, who also invented the marine depth sounder, said the flight recorder can "nurse" a plane through murky weather and locate a plane in distress; would have marked value in wartime by detecting an enemy air fleet through sound waves emanating from whirling propellers.

Dr. Spitz said he spent $100,000 perfecting the flight recorder.

Postoffice inspectors allege Menne sent a letter to his former employers, Mr. and Mrs. George L. Baker, of Petaluma, insisting they pay him a disputed amount in wages on penalty of having their "hash cooked." Menne denied sending the letter.

LATER CROPS THIS YEAR FORECAST

The California Cooperative Crop Reporting service, in its report just received by the farm advisor's office, indicates that California fruit and nut crops of 1937 are later than usual, but as a group show good prospects of production.

The month of May brought good average climatic conditions for these crops, although there were short intervals in some areas when weather was not completely satisfactory. Severe spring frosts have been escaped in all areas.

Citrus Fruits
June 1 is the first date of reporting new crop citrus in California. These reports are of special interest for California crops because of the new crop indications involved, following the freeze of last January. Blossoming has been late, which may render this report less dependable than June 1 reports of more normal seasons.

Many growers state that it is yet too early to make satisfactory estimates as to fruit that may remain after shelling has subsided. May was quite cool in Southern California, and during the last of the month moist and rainy weather occurred, which is not usual, said the report.

Walnuts
California walnuts continue to show prospects of a large crop, which is forecast as 56,000 tons. Although June 1 is ordinarily considered too early to dependably forecast walnuts, a probable prediction is developed at this time in response to special request by the industry.

Total California walnut production for recent years has been: 41,900 tons in 1936; 52,000 in 1935; 43,000 in 1934; 32,000 in 1933; and 45,500 tons in 1932.

Theft of Hotel Register Probed

Proprietors of the Ka-Ro hotel are resorting to memory today in recording the names of their present guests. And they're watching the police station in hopes that the sneak thief who stole their register last night will be caught.

The big book on the counter of the hotel at 807 East Fourth street was intact at 9 p. m., but when Mrs. F. S. Roth came down stairs in the morning the hotel's most valuable record book was gone. And then it was a case for the police.

Bobby Franks' Mother Dies

CHICAGO. (AP)—Mrs. Flora Gresham Louer, 60, mother of Bobby Franks, the boy victim in 1924 of the "thrill slayers," Richard Loeb and Nathan Leopold, died last night. She had been ill a year. Her first husband, Jacob Franks, father of Bobby, died several years after the boy's murder.

F. D. R. PLEADS FOR BUYING POWER

WASHINGTON. (AP)—President Roosevelt told a press conference yesterday something should be done to increase the buying power of the one-third of the population he considers ill housed and ill fed. He said this involved action by the nation's business men as well as continued efforts on the part of the federal government to increase the income share of the under-privileged, possibly through changes in the social security act and other laws.

For nearly a half hour the President expounded on the principle of redistribution of income as scores of newspapermen perspired in his private office. He said some time this summer or next fall he might make a fireside broadcast on the subject or give more details at another press conference.

ALL STEEL and TWO YARDS WIDE

There's a lot more in this picture than meets the eye, though the eye has plenty to sparkle about in the stunning style of this spirited Buick car.

What you don't see here is the lift that's yours when you touch off the flashing power of Buick's valve-in-head straight-eight engine and go streaming off across the map.

What you don't see is the solid, steady feel of Buick—the firm stability that holds you on the line without weave or sway or wander on straight-aways or on the curves.

What you don't see is the assurance you'll know once you step on Buick's tiptoe brakes and see how surely and safely they make you master of its power.

We can't picture here the security that's yours in a body of steel-fused-to-steel—with floor, roof, side panels, cowl all welded into one stout unit of protective metal.

70 WORKERS IN FACTORY COLLAPSE

Experts Seek Cause Of Mass Faintings In French Plant

LILLE, France. (AP)—Seventy girl workers collapsed yesterday in two eerie mass faintings at a Lille sugar refinery.

Thirty fell to the floor, swooning, in the morning, and 40 more fainted in the afternoon.

The work of the plant was disrupted and experts sought to determine the cause.

Most of the victims were younger workers, 17 years old or less, and somewhat frail. None was in a serious condition.

'Y' WILL TEACH NAVIGATION

The Y. M. C. A. today announced a summer class in navigation for the many sailors and boat builders who are learning to operate their vessels on Balboa bay.

The class will begin its work on Wednesday evening, June 23, under the leadership of Hubert Kidder, who conducted a similar class with success last summer, and who has had extensive experience in teaching the subject. He undertakes to set forth an up-to-date, easily understood method for the determination of position of a ship at sea with sufficient accuracy and with no higher mathematics than arithmetic required on the part of the student navigator.

This summer recreation class is offered by the Y. M. C. A. in co-operation with Kidder, without any charge for tuition. It is open to both men and women, but it is highly important that those desiring to take the course should enroll at the opening session so as to get the full benefit, Kidder advised.

Urges Wage Plan For Oil Workers

WASHINGTON. (AP)—Representative Boren (D., Okla.) is advocating a fixed-hour, $5 working day to "solve the labor problem of the oil industry."

He told a joint congressional committee considering the administration wage and hour bill that about 70 per cent of all oil companies already were observing such standards, and that his proposal would "cause no change in the situation, except to bring the chiselers into line."

Unless federal legislation fixes a 36-hour week for the whole industry, he testified, competition would soon force a general deterioration of labor standards.

Permanent Relief Bureau Is Urged

WASHINGTON. (AP)—Representative Maverick (D., Tex.) has proposed the creation of a permanent unemployment commission to make a study of relief and unemployment.

In a statement accompanying his legislative proposal, the Texan said: "To continue making large appropriations on unemployment without knowing what we are doing is not only slipshod and ignorant, but a grave dereliction of duty."

All-Year Club Has New Bureau

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Girls in early day Spanish costumes began giving free information to tourists as the All-Year club opened a bureau at 505 West Sixth street.

MRS. JOHNSON OFF TO AFRICA

NEW YORK. (AP)—Mrs. Martin Johnson, wife of the explorer who was killed five months ago in a western plane crash, left today for London on her first expedition without him, "to carry on my husband's name."

"I think if he could see me now, he'd be proud that I'm going back on this safari," she said as she prepared to leave for Africa, where she spent 16 years with Johnson as his exploring partner.

Comely Mrs. Johnson, the former Osa Leighty, of Chanute, Kans., will be one woman among 212 men when the party treks across Africa from Zanzibar next month, on the route H. M. Stanley followed in his search for David Livingstone, the missionary explorer.

But Mrs. Johnson is "head man." She organized the expedition, and will supervise its work of photographing scenes along the trail for a motion picture to be based on the Livingstone-Stanley story.

Twelve men from Hollywood will fly to Africa with her in a chartered plane, leaving London June 23. Arriving in Africa, they will recruit 200 natives for the trek.

No U. S. Entries In Balloon Race

WASHINGTON. (AP)—The National Aeronautic Association announced there are no American entries this year in the James Gordon Bennett cup International Balloon race starting at Brussels, Belgium, June 29.

The army air corps, which frequently has been represented said it had insufficient time this year to construct a racing balloon for the event. It is, however, making preparations to enter a bag next year.

SAFETY—Latest to be added to the safety features built into the Buick cars for 1937 is this horn mounted on the steering wheel of the new cars. Within finger reach from the steering wheel, it makes it unnecessary for the driver to remove either hand from the wheel to sound the horn as when passing another car or sounding a pedestrian warning.

Since the need for horn warning usually coincides with a need for two-handed control of the car, the device is regarded as an outstanding contribution to safe driving.

Soviet Newsman Disappears

MOSCOW. (AP)—I. Mikhailski, commentator on American political affairs in the official government newspaper, Izvestia, has disappeared from his apartment in the United States embassy building, it was disclosed today. The apartment was visited last Friday night by secret police agents.

Mikhailski, who wrote under the pen name "P. Lapinsky," served as Washington correspondent of Izvestia in 1932 and 1933. He was the immediate predecessor there of Vladimir Romm, who has not been heard from since his appearance as a witness at the Trotskyist sabotage trial involving Karl Radek, also an editor of Izvestia, last January. Radek was sentenced to prison.

Indications point to Mikhailski's arrest.

SWIM CLASS TO BEGIN MONDAY

Swimming for boys and girls, both beginners and advanced, together with instruction in life saving and recreational swimming are offered by the Y. M. C. A. beginning next Monday, according to announcement from the "Y" today.

The instruction will begin Monday at nine o'clock, when the boys assemble for their first swim lesson. They will be divided according to size and ability as swimmers, and their regular class hours will be assigned at that time. Girls will come at 10:30 for their first session. The lessons will continue on each Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning for six weeks. There is no age limit, and children can be taken in quite young, provided they stand 45 inches tall, so as to be able to handle themselves properly.

The life saving classes will be offered on Tuesday and Thursday mornings, depending on the enrollment. If there are enough candidates for the work, there will be separate classes for boys and girls. Otherwise they will be grouped in one class.

Recreational swims for boys are scheduled for Monday and Thursday afternoons from two to four, while for girls, Tuesday and Friday are reserved at the same hours.

Advance registrations for the lessons indicate a large attendance. Many boys and girls learn to swim each summer at the Y. M. C. A. and it is expected that the usual capacity number will take advantage of it again this season.

Reject River Board Appointee

PHOENIX. (AP)—Fred I. Colter, stormy petrel in Arizona's bitter fight against ratification of the Santa Fe Colorado river compact, was rejected yesterday by the state senate as an appointee to the Colorado river commission.

Colter, with J. A. Mulcahy, Tucson lumberman, and Donald C. Scott, Phoenix engineer, was nominated by Gov. R. C. Stanford. The senate confirmed Mulcahy and Scott.

It was the first time in more than a decade that an appointment of an Arizona governor has been formally rejected by the state senate.

WESTERN AUTO SAVINGS TOLD

"Your old tires are worth money to you in making summer touring safer," declares R. C. Harness, manager of the Western Auto Supply company store here, in announcing that his firm is offering greater allowances on old tires traded in on the purchase of new Western Giants during the firm's mid-season savings event, now in progress.

"This is a most timely event for automobile owners," he points out, "for it comes at a time when the touring season is nearing its height, and motorists are equipping their cars for safety and comfort on vacation tours and the many week-end trips they will be taking during the rest of the summer."

"The need for safe tires on the open highway is emphasized by newspaper accounts of recurrence of tragedies caused by blowouts and other tire failure that could be avoided by replacement of worn tires before they get to the dangerous stage of weakened sidewalls and smooth-worn treads," Harness adds.

"In addition to safety, greater comfort and economy are also realized when one has installed new Western Giants all around for steering is easier, riding is cushioned and gasoline consumption is reduced."

The opportunities to save money which are afforded by the Western Auto event, is not limited to tires alone, but also includes extra savings on batteries, and many automobile accessories and camping needs.

Princess Tells About Expected 'Blessed Event'

AMSTERDAM. (AP)—Crown Princess Juliana of the Netherlands indicated to the nation in a broadcast last night that she is expecting the birth of a child who may succeed to the throne.

Thanking the people for the warm reception given her and her husband, Prince Bernhard, when they came to Amsterdam last week, she said:

"I would gladly have liked to attend all the festivities, but for welcome reasons of health, which you will understand and approve, I am prevented from doing so."

BRIDE, 14, WINS GIVE UP HOPES FOR CRAFT

LOS ANGELES. (AP)—Fourteen-year-old Rosella Williams told Superior Judge Charles S. Burnell yesterday she was tricked into marrying William Bragg, 19, in Yuma, Ariz., last April, by statements that they might be "picked up for white slavery" if they did not wed after crossing the California line.

Judge Burnell annulled the marriage at the request of the girl's mother, Mrs. Edna Guelich. Previously, Rosella's girl friend, June Montgomery, 13, won annulment of her marriage to Charles Williams, 18, brother of Rosella. The two young couples were arrested at Indio on their return from Yuma. The boys were sentenced later to terms in the county road camp for contributing to delinquency of minors.

Highway Work Is Awarded

SACRAMENTO. (AP)—Oswald Brothers of Los Angeles have been awarded a contract by Earl Lee Kelly, state director of public works, covering state highway 26 between the east city limits of Los Angeles and the west city limits of Monterey Park, at $7,853.75.

Bernhard Zu Lippe-Siesterfeld were married at The Hague last Jan. 7.

TAMPA, Fla. (AP)—Hope for the safety of the 110-foot motorship Maloa with nine persons aboard has been abandoned here.

The craft, bound from Tampa for Belize, British Honduras, gave a position report by radio on June 4 and has not been heard from since. A search by the coast guard was fruitless.

Walter Hood, brother of Herbert J. Hood, owner of the craft, said he believed she sank with all on board.

BUICK SALES SHOW MAY INCREASE

Domestic retail deliveries of Buick motor cars during May totaled 22,453 cars, comparing with 23,397 in the previous month and 17,513 in the corresponding period a year ago, according to W. D. Gordon, local dealer. This was a decline of approximately 850 cars or 3 per cent from the previous month and a gain of 5030 or 28.7 per cent over May of last year.

Gordon said that Buick's May volume was controlled by the ability of the factory to make delivery, the factory entering June with 28,500 unfilled orders, the largest bank of business for this month in many years.

He said he expected June would show an increase in deliveries over both April and May, with the probability that this month would establish the year's peak.

Buick's domestic retail sales during the month exceeded shipments to dealers by approximately 1000 cars, according to W. F. Hufstader, general sales manager, with output for the month totaling 23,213 units, including export shipments. He said it was expected June production would exceed that of May.

140,836 PEOPLE SWITCHED FROM OTHER CARS TO DODGE IN PAST YEAR!

Read What Some of Them Say... Learn How Dodge Saves Them Money!

"We'll save $70 before the year is out," says Gladys Macmillan of Chicago. "Using our Barron Dodge for comparison, we're getting 8 more miles to the gallon from our Dodge. Our oil and lubrication costs are much lower."

"I've pumped enough gas to know just about what any car will do on a gallon. So, even though I'm in the business, I insist on a car that's long on gas mileage. That's why I switched to Dodge. I'm getting 22 miles to the gallon, regularly."—R. W. Holmes, Los Angeles.

"You can't beat Dodge for economy," said Jimmie Huskisson, Valley Park, Mo. "I am getting 21 miles to the gallon of gas which is 7 miles more than my old car gave me. At the rate I drive that will mean close to $100 saved by the time I have had this new Dodge a year."

IN THE past year, 140,836 people have switched from other cars to Dodge—these in addition to the thousands upon thousands of enthusiastic Dodge owners who say they will drive no other car but Dodge!

New Dodge owners, who previously thought they could not afford so big and fine a car as Dodge, say that Dodge savings on gas, oil, tires and upkeep will more than offset the difference in price and that Dodge will actually cost them less than the small, competitive-make cars they traded in. Many another new Dodge owner, long accustomed to high-priced cars, reports more satisfaction from Dodge than from more expensive cars. Think of it...owner after owner reporting 18 to 24 miles per gallon of gas, saving up to 20% on oil, with additional savings on tires, lubrication and upkeep!

Read the statements of some of the Dodge owners on this page! Then come in and see and drive this new 1937 Dodge. Take the free economy test—see right before your eyes how Dodge saves on gas! Learn how you, too, can switch to Dodge and save money!

DISASTERS IN COUNTY ARE RECALLED

By TERRY E. STEPHENSON
County Treasurer

(Editor's Note: Mother Nature, who usually smiles at Southern California, sometimes is roused to wrath. She blows hot and cold; she shakes the earth; she threatens with drowning and with thirst. County Treasurer Terry E. Stephenson, an old-timer and historian, reviews in this series her antics and what steps can be taken to curb the Old Dame's temper.)

Floods, droughts, extremes in heat and cold, earthquakes and windstorms—all these have come upon what is now Orange county.

All these will come again. The word "will" is used advisedly for Nature has a way of repeating. There is no stress in weather that cannot, may not and almost certainly will not be equalled in times to come.

The purpose of this paper is not to argue so much as it is to present facts that are obtainable by anyone who takes the trouble to dig into the history of Southern California.

Extremes in Weather
The annals of California furnish less data concerning extremes of heat and cold and of windstorms than they do of earthquakes, floods and droughts. The reason for that is that for nearly a century after the Spaniards settled California, beginning with the arrival of Portola's expedition in 1769, extremes of heat and cold and windstorms did little damage to the cattle industry, which throughout that century was the foremost industry of California, excepting only the activities resulting from the discovery of gold in 1848.

Floods, droughts and earthquakes, however, did disturb the people of California throughout that century, as well as during more recent decades.

It is of interest, and perhaps of profit, for us to look back over the pages of history, review some of the things that have happened in this fair land of glorious sunshine, and discuss some of the things that have been done to meet conditions brought about by extreme antics on the part of Dame Nature, and to point out some of the things that have not been done.

About Earthquakes
Severe earthquakes have been few and far between in Orange county. Fortunately no major earthquake fault cuts through the county, unless the Inglewood fault, which touches the western edge is to be numbered as a major earthquake fault. It is, of course, one of the major faults in Southern California. It was responsible for the severe shake of March 10, 1933, and, no doubt for that of July 23, 1769, described by a number of men who were with Don Gaspar Portola on that occasion, which marked the first passing of white men through the Santa Ana valley.

Mission Destroyed
The year 1812 called "el ano de los temblores" brought about the destruction of San Juan Capistrano mission. Extensive damage was done to the mission buildings at Santa Inez and La Purissima. It is likely that the disturbance of 1812 was not so severe as that of 1933. The huge church tower at the mission may have been top-heavy with the weights of its bells, and the church, like many another building of more recent construction, was not built to stand earthquakes.

There were heavy shakes chronicled in Los Angeles July 11, 1855, and Jan. 9, 1857. It was March 26, 1872, that Owens valley suffered its disaster. The town of Lone Pine, shaken to the ground, buried 26 dead. The greatest disaster of all struck San Francisco and the bay region April 18, 1906. The disturbance of 1903, centering at Compton and Long Beach, did severe damage over a large portion of the coastal plane of the Santa Ana valley.

Preparedness
Let us pause here to ask: What can be done about earthquakes? The answer is: Build to meet them.

Knowing that we do have earthquakes, perhaps only one had one in half a century or three-quarters of a century, or a century, is it the sensible thing to do to sit idly by, and let the next one come upon us unprepared?

Most of those municipalities that have suffered the most severe earthquake damage—San Francisco, San Jose, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, Long Beach, and most municipalities that suffered lesser damage, including Santa Ana, have put into effect building regulations that will protect themselves against heavy damage even should earthquakes more severe than any they have experienced hitherto come upon them.

There may be cities in Orange county that have not adopted proper building regulations to protect themselves. There may be some where eternal vigilance does not prevail.

Whatever the situation is, this we do know about earthquakes—we can protect ourselves by building to meet the heaviest, the most damaging earthquakes recorded by the history of this area. Steel and reinforced concrete, good mortar between the bricks, good wood construction—these things have been called into use. They are our avenue of assurance.

FIND ASTHMA, HAY FEVER TREATMENT

BOSTON (AP)—Dr. J. I. Dowling of Albany, N. Y., yesterday reported to doctors at the American Institute of Homeopathy convention what he said was a new treatment giving prompt relief, and accomplishing in many cases a cure, for hay fever and asthma.

Speaking before the eye, ear, nose and throat association of the A. I. H., Dr. Dowling said his treatment, which consisted, in effect, of coating the nasal passages with a copper solution, was a new technique.

Asthma, Dr. Dowling declared, could be cured in a period of time lasting from several weeks to three years depending on other physical conditions of the patient. Hay-fever, however, he added, was very amenable, provided there were no difficulties needing surgery in the nasal tracts.

ACCUSE MAN OF SLAYING WIFE

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jealousy was blamed by police today for the hatchet slaying of 27-year-old Anna Arefkin, mother of two children, as her husband, Sefrak Arefkin, 50, faced a charge of murder. "I did it; I hit her with a hatchet," Detective Lieutenant Guy Beeson quoted Arefkin as saying when he was arrested yesterday. "She was going out with younger men. I didn't intend to kill her."

Mrs. Arefkin died on an operating table as her husband, handcuffed to officers, watched surgeons try to save her life.

Lita Files New Divorce Action

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A renewed plea by Lita Grey for divorce from Movie Actor Henry Aguirre, Jr., was on file in superior court today. Former wife of Charlie Chaplin, noted comedian, Miss Grey asked permission to introduce testimony of her mother which, she indicated, would bolster evidence that she was entitled to marital freedom. Miss Grey was denied a divorce May 13.

Aguirre and Miss Grey were married in Santa Ana in 1936.

Federal Theater Projects Closed

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Two of the five theaters operated by the federal theater project in Los Angeles county were closed yesterday by telegraphed orders from Washington which also cancelled plans for touring shows.

P. Howard Miller, regional director, who issued the orders, instructed that 100 non-relief workers on the project be laid off immediately and that 100 others be dismissed by July 15.

Protege of Mrs. Roosevelt Offered Three Film Jobs

NEW YORK (AP)—Robert Jonay, 17-year-old dancer and protege of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, considered offers from three movie companies and one theatrical producer today—and therein lay a Cinderella story.

A year ago she was shy, demure, Roberta Jones, of St. Petersburg, Fla., distinguished only by her pleasing voice and her love of dancing.

Her widowed mother and her sister, an art student, encouraged her to practice ballet dancing which she had learned at the neighborhood playhouse.

Then she met Earl Miller, a handsome former bodyguard of President Roosevelt, now director of personnel in the state department of correction. They became engaged.

One night last summer, Miller took her to a party at Hyde Park, while the President and Mrs. Roosevelt were there. Roberta danced, and the Roosevelts were enchanted.

Roberta remained for several weeks at Hyde Park, at Mrs. Roosevelt's invitation.

Two weeks ago she was invited to Washington to dance at a newspapermen's White House party. Then came a two-weeks' engagement at a Washington hotel, and throughout that time she stayed at the White House.

Roberta, determined not to capitalize on the first lady's name, said Mrs. Roosevelt "takes an interest in everybody."

She said Mrs. Roosevelt taught her to knit, and once came to the hotel where she was dancing, watched her and "even offered some suggestions about my routine."

GOVERNOR IN ATTACK ON CRITICS

SACRAMENTO (AP)—California will live up to its obligations to the unemployed, Governor Merriam said in a statement here.

After making this assertion, the governor replied sharply to statements made by two of his critics among the members of the California Supervisors' Association which recently adopted and then reconsidered for further deliberation and a referendum resolution repudiating his veto of their relief bill.

"To the charge voiced at the supervisors' meeting by Stanley Abel of Kern county that the governor 'wants the $24,000,000 relief fund for a gigantic slush fund to re-elect himself,' he replied heatedly:

"It's False"
"If he has any evidence that in the years which I have managed relief indicating I indulged in any political activity, he is advised to come forward and make it known," he said.

"If he hasn't, I can say it's false and I could use a shorter word."

"It's my understanding the supervisors were engaged during the legislature in the raising of a $15,000 to $17,000 fund to lobby their bill through. If that isn't playing politics with human misery, I don't know what is."

The governor said he had no fight with the supervisors of the state, that he realizes "most of them want to cooperate in solving the problems of relief, but there have been two or three in their association who have undertaken to compel the acceptance of their program whether it is satisfactory or not. They don't number very many. You could count them on the fingers of one hand. Most of them are trying to do what is right."

The governor took equally blunt issue with Supervisor C. E. Grier,

Leaders Pledge Loyalty to Clyde Ashen as New State Knights of Columbus Chief Paying tribute to the record of service of a Santa Ana official in the state order of Knights of Columbus last night pointed to Clyde Ashen as their new leader in an aggressive campaign against the anti-democratic and anti-religious forces of Communism.

More than 300 knights and civic and church officials gathered in American Legion hall to honor Ashen, who will hold the highest state position in the order during the next year—state deputy. He is the first man to be chosen for this office in a city south of Los Angeles.

Lack of Religion
Joseph Scott, first state deputy, who was made Knight of St. Gregory by the Pope, made the principal address as guest speaker.

Laying prime blame for the problems of the country to a forgetting of religious principles, Scott said in part:

"The forces arrayed today against the principles of religion and democracy have never before been equalled. The men who founded this country were a religious people. But today most of the American people profess no religion."

Concluding, Mr. Scott said: "It is fitting that we come to a relatively small city, a place where people can and do live normal lives, where the forces of law and order are not a menace, for a leader for our order."

Represents Ideal
The Rev. Lewis A. Mulvihill, chaplain, Knights of Columbus, Dual district, Redondo Beach, cited the seriousness of the task laid out for Ashen, saying:

"He stands for the personification of an ideal—one to which we should all give heed. Americans have a mighty mission in the world today—the preservation of the ideal of democracy and liberty. The Knights of Columbus have this sense of dedication to this ideal."

"Now the Knights of Columbus are planning a methodical campaign against communism. And there is but one means of combat—to go among the working men and prove we are their friends. That is the program the Knights of Columbus intend to inaugurate."

Need for Reverence
The Rev. O. Scott McFarland, pastor of the First Presbyterian church of Santa Ana, declaring that "the great need of us all is to have a reverence for life at its best," voiced an expression from Protestantism of sympathy for the order.

"The high responsibility of all of us," he said, "no matter of what faith, is that we think through the problems that confront us."

Ashen, in his speech of response, announced the specific plans of the order in carrying out their campaign.

"A state committee to crusade against atheistic communism will be formed, with chairmen in San Francisco, Fresno and Los Angeles. From these points speakers will be sent out into the field."

Welcome by Mayor
An address of welcome was made by Mayor Fred C. Rowland, followed by a short talk by Joseph

JUDGES PLAN ALUMINUM RULING

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Three judges of the U. S. circuit court of appeals have named themselves as a special expediting court to rule on an order by Federal Judge Robert M. Gibson of Pittsburgh, which stopped the government's antitrust suit against the Aluminum Company of America.

Judge Gibson's order prevented the government from bringing action against the company outside the western Pennsylvania federal court district because a court order made in 1912 against the company is still effective.

At the request of Walter L. Rice, special attorney general, Judges J. Warren Davis, J. Whitaker Thompson and John Biggs, Jr., consented to conduct a hearing and fixed it for Wednesday at Trenton, N. J.

William Watson Smith, counsel for the company, opposed the court's jurisdiction and was informed by the judges his protest would be considered at the hearing.

The government's action against the company was brought last April in New York City. The company obtained the order from Judge Gibson restraining the suit May 14.

J. Rosborough, the retiring state deputy.

Edward W. Heffner, Grand Knight of the Santa Ana council, opened the meeting and turned it over to Dr. V. A. Rossiter, past Grand Knight of the Santa Ana council. Dr. Rossiter introduced the many civic officials, fraternal leaders and church officers who were present.

Solos were rendered by Miss Pearl Hunter and James McGarrigle.

S. A. Junior College to Graduate 196 Students

CEREMONIES TO BE HELD TOMORROW

Class Is Largest In History of Local Institution

One hundred and ninety-six students at Santa Ana Junior college will march down the aisles of Santa Ana High school auditorium to receive their Associate of Arts certificates and Secretarial certificates tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. This will be the twenty-first commencement exercise.

The parade of graduates will be the largest number to receive junior certificates in the history of the college. There will be 37 students receiving secretarial certificates.

To Award Prizes
Awards for outstanding students in various lines of activity will be given at the exercises. The Robert L. Brown prize, the Gamma prize and Alpha Gamma Sigma award. The latter is the first time it has been offered.

The Brown prizes are given to the outstanding man and woman of the class. The faculty chooses to whom the $25 awards will go. The points upon which they are selected are scholastic achievement, leadership in student affairs, catholicity of interests, unselfish service to the college community, character and health. Those who received the awards last year were Louise Sexton, Mary Wallace and Joseph Langland. The women tied for the honor.

Democracy
The Beta Gamma prize is offered to the student judged the most outstanding in extra-curricular activities. Mary Lou McFarland and Walt Bandick tied for the prize last year.

"Democracy Decides" is the topic of the talk to be given by Dr. W. B. Bunting. Dr. Bunting is acting dean of the school of government at the University of Southern California.

Superintendent Frank A. Henderson will preside at the exercises and also will award the certificates to graduates. The high school and college orchestra will play "Olympian March" by Roth.

Overture
The academic procession will include the faculty followed by candidates for the title of Associate of Arts and candidates for certificates in secretarial practice.

The overture "Lustspiel" by Keler-Bela will be followed by the singing of "The Light of Dawning" (Tchaikovsky) by the women's chorus.

George R. Wells, president of the board of education, will deliver greetings from that body. Dr. Henley will then speak.

To Present Class
Director D. K. Hammond of the Jaycee will present the class. Conferring of titles of Associate of Arts and Secretarial Practice will be made by Superintendent Henderson.

Announcements of honors will be made. The men's chorus will sing "Hark! Hark! the Lark" (Schubert). Benediction will be offered by the Rev. Harry Evan Owens.

The procession will exit to the music of "Hail America" by Drumm.

4-H CAMP WILL OPEN JUNE 22
All details have been completed for the summer camp for 4-H members of Orange and Riverside counties, which will be held from June 22 to 26 inclusive.

The camp this year will be held at Camp Radford in the San Bernardino mountains. H. B. Richardson of the Agricultural Extension service in Riverside county is to be camp director and will be assisted by Ross E. Crane and Miss Frances Liles of the local Extension service office.

GARDNER NEW J. C. ANNUAL EDITOR

Appointment of next year's editor for Del Amo, Santa Ana Junior college yearbook, was announced today. He is Jack Gardner, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Gardner, 2026 North Main street.

Mrs. Eleanor Northerness, literary advisor for the book, made the announcement.

Tay Riggs was editor for the current year. The annual just made its appearance on the Don campus.

WOMEN VOTERS MEET FRIDAY

Members of the League of Women Voters will hold their final meeting before summer adjournment Friday at 12:30 p. m. in the Doris Kathryn Tea shop, it was announced today.

It will be a luncheon event, to which all women interested in governmental affairs are cordially invited to attend, whether or not they are members of the league.

Baxter Geeting, instructor in the Westwood High school, school of government, and authority on governmental trends, will discuss the subject, "Pageantry in Politics" as the featured speaker at the closing session.

In addition to the address by Geeting, a report on the recent southern conference of League of Women Voters will be made by Mrs. T. D. Campbell.

Mrs. Felton Browning, first president of the local league, will preside as chairman of the day.

Sally Convinces Alderman With Private Exhibit

UNIONTOWN, Pa. (AP) — A performance behind drawn shades and locked doors convinced Alderman Frank R. Foster that two state policemen must have been mistaken about Sally Rand's conduct and attire (or lack of it).

State Policemen Paul A. Rittelmeyer and H. H. Harrison claimed she had disrobed on the stage during a late appearance at a theater.

In the alderman's office, Sally repeated her act. Foster decided there was insufficient evidence.

TO AIR COURT PLAN FRIDAY

The Orange county dinner meeting of the League for Supreme Court Independence has been set for Friday night at Dangler's cafe in Santa Ana, it was announced today by Ben Tarver, chairman of the Orange county committee of the league, after receipt of assurance that Jacob D. Allen, Chicago educator and lecturer, would be able to make the principal address.

Allen was injured in an automobile accident near San Juan Capistrano, causing postponement of the meeting scheduled originally for June 10.

George Raymer, who has aided Tarver and Jules Markel, chairman of the Santa Ana city committee of the league, in organizing the meeting, said he expected delegations from the service clubs and organized groups of the county, as well as the women's organizations, which will make it representative of the many and varied interests of the county.

County Gains in 'Highway Trade'

Orange county lost one highway from the county system and gained three new ones Tuesday, as the board of supervisors approved inclusion of three South Laguna roads in the system and abandonment of part of La Homa street in Cypress.

COUNTY HIRES AMBULANCE SERVICE

Supervisors yesterday decided to contract for private ambulance service instead of buying an ambulance to replace the one which burned with the loss of two lives last Thursday night.

Harry D. Riley, hospital and garage committeeman, said he believed the county could save from $40 to $50 a month by contracting.

The board accepted the offer of the Orange County Ambulance Service, Santa Ana, to handle up to 50 calls per month for $100 per month, plus $150 each for extra calls. In the offer the ambulance service reserved the right to make the regular ambulance service charge to persons who are able to pay.

Riley said it would cost from $2500 to $3000 to buy an ambulance for the county hospital.

RAIL GROUP'S CHIEF QUILTS

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen's office here said A. F. Whitney, its president, had resigned from the Railway Labor Executives' Association, which is made up of representatives from 21 railway labor organizations.

Allen was injured in an automobile accident near San Juan Capistrano, causing postponement of the meeting scheduled originally for June 10.

George Raymer, who has aided Tarver and Jules Markel, chairman of the Santa Ana city committee of the league, in organizing the meeting, said he expected delegations from the service clubs and organized groups of the county, as well as the women's organizations, which will make it representative of the many and varied interests of the county.

INVESTIGATING FUND USED UP
Sheriff Logan Jackson has exhausted his $2500 annual "secret investigation" fund, it was revealed yesterday afternoon when county supervisors checked a bill from a detective agency for investigation work.

The board took no action to reject the bill, but objected to charges of 10 cents per mile for use of cars in addition to pay of $15 and $10 per man per day. District Attorney W. F. Menton explained the bill had come to the board because the fund from which the sheriff is allowed to make secret expenditures is used up and that further detective bills must be on regular county forms. He said the fees of $10 to $15 per day and 10 cents a mile are the regular fees charged by detective agencies.

Mrs. Stanley Anderson Entertains at Luncheon Complimenting Anne Tarver

New Home Is Scene Of Party

Bride-to-Be Is Given Many Lovely Gifts In Crystal

Gifts of lovely crystal for Miss Anne Tarver, who is to marry Tevis Westgate this month, were brought by guests who attended a bridge luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Stanley Anderson in honor of the charming bride-elect. Fragrant flowers from the gardens of Mrs. R. Langley and Mrs. C. W. Harrison added to the attractiveness of the new home at 2040 North Flower street which the Andersons have just built and which was setting for the affair. Pansy-rings centered each luncheon table.

Mrs. Anderson, who will be remembered as Miss Lucile Bates, was assisted throughout the afternoon by Mrs. Joel Ogle, Mrs. Wayne Harrison and Mrs. Edward Hall, and after the pretty gifts were opened and admired by Miss Tarver, awarded first and second prizes at contract to Mrs. Arnold Norton and Mrs. Richard Ewert.

Those invited to the enjoyable party included the guest of honor, her mother, Mrs. B. E. Tarver, Mrs. Ben Tarver, Jr., Mrs. Hume, West, Mrs. Richard Ewert, Mrs. Joel Ogle, Mrs. Leland Finley, Mrs. Edward Hall, Mrs. Arnold Norton, Mrs. Rola Hays, Jr., Mrs. Kingsley Tuttle, Mrs. Lynan Farwell, Mrs. Burt Zaiser, Mrs. Glenn Mathes, Mrs. Lyle Kelly, Mrs. Harold Harrison, Mrs. Frank Harrington, Mrs. Wayne Harrison, Mrs. Joe Smith, Mrs. Donald Harwood, Mrs. Warren Wilson, Mrs. Robert Hill, Mrs. Kenneth Conner, and Mrs. Gail Jordan.

A dainty floral pattern in many colors is woven on a roomy handbag of navy blue linen. The bag, designed by Mme. Ida Jolles of Vienna, has a flexible metal handle and a slide fastener. The natural straw hat with the daisy-padded crown is one of Jean King's.

PETIT POINT ON LINEN

College Set Banquets Tonight

Tropical will be the keynote of the setting in which students of Santa Ana Junior college will gather tonight for their annual spring banquet, the climax of the social season for the college younger set.

Palms bank the walls of the dining-room at the Santa Ana Country club in readiness for the gay event, and little palm trees, flowers and shrubs of southern climes line the tables at which places are laid for the student body and guests.

With members of the school board as the honored guests of the evening, the college will take this occasion to install and introduce those students chosen to fill the student body offices for the coming year. Neil McDaniels, retiring president, acting in the role of installing officer.

Those to be installed are Albert Pickhardt, president-elect; Lawrence Trickey, vice president; Miss Virginia Sheppard, secretary; Carl Aubrey, treasurer; Dick Phillips, commissioner of forensics and assemblies; Eloise McReynolds, commissioner of social activities; Bob Wilde, commissioner of men's athletics; Helen Lowe, commissioner of women's athletics; Vic Rowland, editor of El Don.

The retiring officers, also to be introduced, are Mr. McDaniels, the president; Fred Ehrhaus, secretary; Eloise Walker, secretary; Kenneth Nissley, treasurer; Albert Pickhardt, commissioner of forensics; Bill Greschner, men's athletics; Velma Kuechel, women's athletics; Bob Swanson, editor of El Don; Fay Riggs, editor of Del Amo; LaVonne Frandson, social commissioner.

Hawaiian music during the dinner and selections by a Hawaiian trio will further carry out the decorative motif. The dinner program will also include humorous speeches by Walt Bandick, Frances Was and Vic Rowland, and dancing will follow. Athletic and other events are to be given out during the evening.

Special guests of the evening are to include Mr. and Mrs. Rola Hays, Dr. Margaret D. Baker, George R. Wells, Mr. and Mrs. Ridley C. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. D. K. Hammond and Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Flint.

Miss Frandson, social commissioner this past year, is general chairman of tonight's affair, which is semi-formal, and she has been assisted by Miss Betty West, in charge of decorating; Gordon Bishop, advertising; Kenneth Nissley, finances, and Miss Betty Lee, program.

NEARLY WEDS ARE FETED BY ALBERT HARVEYS

Complimenting Miss Dorothy Cromer and Harold Harvey, who are to be married this coming Saturday, the Albert Harveys entertained at an informal party last night at their pretty home on Louise street.

A fashionable guessing game and contests made the evening merry, with Mrs. Jack Rimel receiving a prize for winning a spelling bee, and Mrs. Carson Smith, for word-making. Miss Cromer was presented with a pretty gift by her hostess and future sister-in-law.

Others present beside the guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Carson Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Rimel, Mr. and Mrs. E. Lee Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Robert U. Smith, Miss Alma McLain, and Wylie Carlyle.

SORORITY HAS GUESTS FROM FULLERTON

Santa Ana chapter of Kappa Delta Phi entertained Fullerton chapter Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Marcene Cook, 1012 West Second street. Mrs. William Stark, local president, presiding over the meeting, during which plans were discussed for the state convention.

Late in the evening Miss Cook served a light supper to the Mesdames Stark, Thomas Pangle, Godfrey, president, Meredith Rumley, Chester, president, Charles Woodruff, Frances Lacy, and the Mesdames Vivian Van Norman, Louise Pee, Estelle Schlesinger, and Jean Gaspar.

Committee in charge of the affair was composed of Mrs. Anna Sullivan, Mrs. Esther Smith, Mrs. Ella Johnson, Mrs. Fannie Armstrong, Mrs. Effie Hawley, Mrs. Irene Stewart, and Mrs. Ruth O'Mallia.

DO YOUR JOB FOR THE JOB'S SAKE, NOT FOR PRAISE—MRS. ROOSEVELT

"Never allow your personal feelings to interfere with anything that may help the cause you are serving. I have known many people who because they were not given personal credit for some achievement turned against the very cause they had most at heart."

This is the advice that Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt gave to women coming to Washington to fill official positions. Even if you're not going to Washington, it's very good advice to every woman everywhere. Women in Parent-Teacher associations, women in lodge work, in church work, in business and even the little woman at home would do well to heed that advice.

Kansas To Be New Home Of Couple

The Orange Presbyterian church was the setting for the wedding of Miss Caryl Harper, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles B. Harper, and Archie Adams, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Adams, all of Orange, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Robert Burns McAulay, pastor of the church, reading the rites.

Pink and white delphinium and dozens of lighted tapers graced the altar before which the wedding party met. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white lace, princess style, with train, long sleeves and high neck. Her fingertip veil was held with orange blossoms, and she carried white roses with a shower of white sweet peas.

The matron of honor was Mrs. Roland Ewing of Atascadero, her sister, wearing pale green net and carrying pink sweet peas and blue delphinium. Bridesmaids were Mrs. Wayne Davis of Cozad, Neb., another sister, and Miss Agnes Adams, sister of the bridegroom.

Two small maids were flower girls, Barbara Jean McAulay, dressed in a formal of peach taffeta, and Alyce Woods, wearing gold taffeta.

Loren Housley was best man, and ushers were Dick Wichman, Roland Ewing, William Shodgrass and Oscar Schultz.

Wedding marches were played by Miss Eldene Watson, who also accompanied Mrs. Wayne Davis on the organ when she sang. During the ceremony Miss Virginia Wilbur played "Love's Old Sweet Song" on a muted violin.

A reception followed in the adult auditorium of the church, made gay with summer flowers.

A large wedding cake, made by a friend of the bride, Miss Laura Rice, was cut by the new Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Judith Payne and Mrs. F. M. Gulick pointed. Others assisting in serving were the Mesdames Henrietta Settle, Ellen McCollum, Laura Rice, Lila Elbert and Jean Kirkpatrick.

The couple then left by motor for their new home near Wier, Kan., where the bridegroom has a farm. The bride wore for traveling a gray suit with red accents.

She is a graduate of the Orange high school, Santa Ana Junior college and Santa Barbara State college, and has taught the past year in Villa Park. The bridegroom was educated in Kansas.

BRIDGE TEA IS SCHEDULED AT COUNTRY CLUB

Society is anticipating with great pleasure another of the delightful teas to be given at the Santa Ana Country club this Friday afternoon by the board of directors' wives. Their special guests this week will be Ellen Smith, who will be the guest of honor, and many others are making their reservations now either at the club or with the committee.

Mrs. A. G. Flagg, Mrs. Harold Wright, and Mrs. R. C. Hoiles, standing committee in charge of the affair for the year, will be assisted in arrangements by Mrs. Charles Cogan, Mrs. Frank Drumm and Mrs. Ralph Cole. Mrs. Bennie Osterman is attending to prizes and Mrs. E. D. Holmes, Jr. and Mrs. George Parker will decorate.

SIXTH GRADE GIVES PLAY

Sixth graders of Roosevelt entertained their parents and friends with a delightful end-of-the-year program Tuesday morning at the school, presenting the three-act play, "Pages From History," which they themselves had written. Miss Pearl Campbell, their teacher, directed them.

The grade also presented to the school several gifts which they had purchased with money raised from sales from their flower garden and proceeds from their puppet shows.

DELEGATES TO LEAVE SUNDAY

A talk on beauty hints, coming styles, hairdressing and cosmetics was given members of Delta Chi Sigma when they met Monday night at the home of Miss Dorothy Cromer, 404 East Chestnut street. Miss Grady was the featured speaker and gave some very valuable suggestions.

The affair was also as a farewell to Miss Frances Roberts and Mrs. Lloyd Manderscheid, who leave Sunday for Detroit to attend the national convention there of Delta Chi Sigma.

Mary Stoddard Children Are Being Ruined as Result of Bitterness and Spite of Parents

Some parents have all the earmarks of spoiled children! Their petty traits may appear humorous to the world of grownups, but when they are actually warping the minds of their offspring by their silly acts, it's high time that they are brought "back to school" in the juvenile court! Recently we had an example of this sad state of affairs when the lonely young father who signed himself "Jack" wrote that his wife boasted of marrying him so that she might have a child legally. When the baby was a few weeks old she left and secured a divorce. The last time he saw his little son, who is now 4, the youngster ridiculed him in hissing baby prattle. The unscrupulous young mother's unjust influence over her child will cause him to have a warped mind as he grows to manhood.

Book Review Group Ends Year

The vast leafy spread of Miss Martha Ritchie's beautiful old mulberry tree once again cast its cool green shadows over a happy Ebbl group yesterday afternoon when members of Book Review section gathered at a long luncheon table for their annual garden luncheon and Play-Day.

Taking the term "Play-Day" much in earnest, they were privileged to hear Mona Summers Smith's reading of the Pulitzer prize play, "You Can't Take It With You" later in the day. Her delightful interpretation was preceded by a brief business session, the final one to be conducted by Mrs. Earl Abbey, whose place as leader will be taken when the group next convenes in October, by Mrs. Paul Bailey.

Mrs. Abbey graciously thanked her assisting officers of the year, including Mrs. John Cloyes, program chairman, who introduced Mrs. Smith. In turn, Mrs. Aldric Worswick expressed the thanks of the group to their retiring leader, Mrs. Perry Lewis, who came in for her share of thanks for managing the enjoyable luncheon.

Mrs. Bailey announced that Mrs. Terry Stephenson would act as program chairman for the coming year, with the assistance of Mrs. John Tessman and Miss Ritchie, and that she would give the first review of next year.

Special guests for the day were Mrs. Marvin, visiting her niece, Mrs. David Howell, from South Carolina, Miss Carolyn White and Mrs. Robert Guild.

Members enjoying this final session of the year included Mrs. Abbey, Mrs. Bailey, Miss Ritchie, Mrs. Cloyes, Mrs. Lewis, Mrs. Stephenson, Mrs. Tessman, Mrs. C. F. Smith, Mrs. Lillian Pritchett, Mrs. F. F. Jayne, Mrs. E. B. Sprague, Miss Mabel McFadden, Mrs. Harwood Sharp, Mrs. C. P. Boyer, Mrs. Sam Nau, Mrs. T. R. Trawick, Mrs. Aldric Worswick, Mrs. David Howell, Mrs. E. B. Howell, Mrs. E. D. White, Mrs. J. H. White, Mrs. E. M. Nalley, Mrs. A. H. Hatch, Mrs. S. W. Stanley, Mrs. W. A. Waddell, Mrs. A. Stebbins, Miss Preble Drake, Mrs. L. A. White and Mrs. Robert Northcross.

CHAPTER HEARS PROGRAM FOR SUMMER

Announcement of summer activities and recess featured Santa Ana chapter of Eastern Star's meeting this week at the Masonic temple, with Betty Gowdy and Courtney Chandler presiding.

Annual party night will be June 22, according to Sue Henry, associate matron. On July 12, birthdays of members will be honored, and July 26 and August 9 will be dark nights, with no business sessions. On a family party, in charge of Ellen Smith, chapter meetings will be resumed August 23, at a Brother's Night meeting.

Escort honors were given at this week's meeting to the following past matrons and patrons: Jennie Shippe, Helen Aubin, Nellie Sylvester, Sadie Roehm, Elizabeth Kloess, Irma Folger, Emma Barnard, Elton Roehm, George Shippe, Theodore Hunter, and Henry Meyer.

Mrs. Mary Nikey was initiated, and Arlette Sturgenzer was reinstated.

Refreshments were served by a committee composed of Mrs. Jane Morse, Mrs. Laura Keseman, Mrs. Marie McGinnis, Mrs. H. C. Henry Meyer, and Glen Lycan.

LOIS LAMBERT IS HONOR GUEST

That popular bride-elect, Miss Lois Lambert, was again guest of honor at a pretty party Monday evening when Mrs. T. J. Devine and Miss Anna Mae Devine, her aunt and cousin, were hostesses in their Garden Grove home.

A color scheme of green and white was carried out in dessert and appointments and tallies, and at the evening's card game went to Mrs. Jack Devine, high, and Mrs. Anna McConnell, low.

A lovely blue and yellow set of pottery was presented Miss Lambert by the assembled guests, who included Mrs. John Walton, Mrs. Walter Devine, Mrs. Anna McConnell, and Miss Maxine McConnell, all of Garden Grove; and the Mesdames Mary Wallace, W. H. Bass, Jack Devine, George Palmer, J. W. Walton, Betty Lockett, and Walter Raymond, all of Santa Ana.

DINNER IN WHITTIER

Mr. and Mrs. Gene Thomas of Newport Road, Tustin, were dinner guests Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. McAllister in Whittier, enjoying moving pictures of the Whittier parade in which several Santa Anans, among them, Mr. Thomas on "Reina," rode. Mr. and Mrs. George Boyd were also invited to the dinner, but were unable to attend.

Garden Rites For Former Resident

A beautiful summer garden formed the setting Monday night for a beautiful summer wedding in which Miss Madeline Barker, a former Santa Ana girl now living in Alhambra, became the bride of Dr. Edward Westphal, a young medical school graduate with whom she had studied in the Pasadena hospital school.

The setting of the wedding was the home of the bridegroom's uncle, in the foothills of Glendale overlooking the town and valley.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Barker of Alhambra, former Santa Anans, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Barker of Riverside Drive, Santa Ana, was given in marriage by her father.

Her lovely gown of white satin, with trailing train and a long tulle veil, was made by her sister, Miss Katherine Barker, whose role as maid of honor in this week's wedding will be supplanted by that of bride in her own nuptials later this summer. She had also made her own pretty frock of pale green net over pink taffeta.

Two Ontario friends of the bride, wearing gowns similar to that of the maid of honor, attended as bridesmaids in the impressive, outdoor ceremony.

Music inside the house accompanied the processional to the improvised altar and the service.

Two hundred guests witnessed the rites, among them the parents and the grandparents of both the bride and the bridegroom. The latter's father and mother came from Brazil, where Mr. Westphal is a mission preacher, to attend the wedding of their son and also his graduation Sunday night from Loma Linda medical college.

Their honeymoon trip, on which they departed following a reception in the house, will take the couple to Yosemite and the Big Trees region, then back to Los Angeles where they will make their home. They will live near the White Memorial hospital at which Dr. Westphal is to take his internship.

The bride, who lived here during her childhood, is a graduate of Chaffey Junior college in Ontario and of the Pasadena hospital nursing school, and has been nursing this past year. She also had four months' training at Stanford Lane in San Francisco.

'NICE AND OLD LADYISH' DRESS FOR WEDDING

WASHINGTON (AP)—A dress that "kind of nice and old ladyish" is Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt's choice for the wedding of her son, Franklin Jr., to Miss Ethel DuPont June 30.

Mrs. Roosevelt described it to us today, after saying that the dress is of a flowered chiffon with "mixy colors" on the white background. Her white hat will be fairly large, trimmed in "the same colors."

The President will wear a cut-away coat.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she and the President followed the usual custom and gave the couple a silver for a wedding present.

She said she also had sent Miss DuPont a waist-length single stand of small pearls, made from the dog collar given her by the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt. The first lady is still wearing a similar string intended for John's bride when he marries.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she understood Franklin's grandmother was giving his bride a diamond crescent which had belonged to her many years.

MRS. STEFFENSEN HOSTESS TO FAHOLO CLASS

Faholo class of the First Baptist church had an enjoyable meeting Monday night at the home of Mrs. Leslie Steffensen, who was assisted in her hostess duties by Miss Beulah Parker and Miss Laura Joiner.

Devotions were led by Mrs. E. L. Toles, and a Bible reading was given by Miss Irene Catland, after which everyone joined in an amateur radio program in charge of Mrs. William D. Dennis.

Those to whom the hostesses served a refreshment course included the Mesdames J. C. Johnson, John Swanne, Clyde Cave, J. W. Brown, William E. L. Dennis, Lloyd G. Richards, P. J. Reifel, Lawrence Coffman, and the Mesdames Ella Vezie, Ruth Coad, Vera Coad, Irene Cravath, Irene Catland, Edna Ingham, Jo Eilers, and Mildred Marchant.

ATTEND FLAG DAY PICNIC

Among those from Santa Ana and vicinity attending the Flag Day exercises and picnic of the United Spanish War Veterans in Ganessa park, Pomona, Sunday were the following:

Commander Charles I. Reagan and Mrs. Reagan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Dixon, Mr. and Mrs. William Brown and daughter and two grandchildren, Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph G. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Butler, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Helmer, Mr. and Mrs. William Curran, Messrs. Ernest M. Swindler, and Edward E. Patmore; Mesdames May Glaze, Jean Tantlinger, Louella Marie Lindquist, Mabel Sanders, Emma Wassum and Bobbie Bauer, Mrs. Mary Mann and daughter, Mrs. Mary Van Ornam and Bobbie Glaze.

SCHOOL PICNIC

Second and third graders of John Muir school anticipated vacation joys when they went out to Jack Fisher park this afternoon for a gay outing in true picnic style.

KANSAS CITY COUPLE VISITS FAMILY HERE

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Buxton, who arrive here Saturday from Kansas City, and who are visiting at the home of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Buxton of 630 North Ross street, were inspiration for a family reunion party Sunday at the family home.

Present were Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCoy of Los Angeles, Mrs. R. G. Simpson, Mary Louise Lane, Billy Lane, Raymond Simpson, Jr., Gary Fowler Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Fowler and the Buxtons.

The Buxtons plan to visit several relatives in California before returning to Kansas City, among them their daughter, Mrs. Frank McCoy of Los Angeles, and four sisters of Mr. Buxton, Mrs. Roy Roney of Van Nuys, Mrs. C. A. Fowler of Santa Ana, Mrs. William Lane of Tustin, and Miss Katherine Buxton of Santa Ana.

POMONA COLLEGE GRADUATES LOCAL FOLK

Graduation of their son, Robert, from Pomona college has given rise to several pleasant activities for Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McFadden of 1108 North Main street, themselves alumni of the school.

They attended the alumni luncheon and dinner given at the college gardens Saturday, and again on Sunday were present at Baccalaureate services in the Greek theater. Others attending the banquet from Santa Ana were Dr. and Mrs. G. E. Raitt, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hays, Mrs. Mabel McFadden and Hugh Walker.

Commencement exercises were held Monday night, with Dr. Max Mason, noted Pasadena scientist, as speaker. One hundred and fifty students received their diplomas at that time, among them seven young people from Orange county. These were the Mesdames Lucille Wolfe and Letitia Morgan, and Messrs. Robert McFadden and Weston Finley Sprague of Santa Ana; Robert Dyer Spurgeon of Orange, and Miss Alice Leath Lang and Gordon DeLapp of Huntington Beach.

GRANDMOTHER IS HONORED

Mrs. John J. Vernon and Mrs. Charles Rumell had the pleasure last Friday of honoring their grandmother, Mrs. Elizabeth Good of Altadena, at a little pre-birthday luncheon when she came over to spend the day with them.

Her 93rd birthday anniversary, which was yesterday, was the occasion for the celebration, in which her two granddaughters, her daughter, Mrs. A. B. Sholly of Altadena and Mrs. Rumell's two daughters, Jo Anna and Charlene, participated.

Yesterday, Mrs. Rumell and Mrs. Vernon went over to Altadena for another celebration at the Sholly home, where friends of the birthday girl gathered.

HONORS SON ON BIRTHDAY

Mrs. Raymond Marfile of West Seventeenth, who was grade mother to the fifth grade of Tustin grammar school last year, planned a gay birthday celebration for her son, Ronald's, 11th natal day.

She took refreshments to the school on Thursday so that 19 of Ronald's schoolmates and his teacher, Miss M. Tuley, could enjoy the good time with him. Pictures were taken of the party.

Musical Arts Club Heads Installed

Disappointed at the last moment in the program which Long Beach club members had planned several weeks ago to bring to this final meeting of the year, Musical Arts club members gathered last night at Danigers for a formal dinner party and installation of officers.

To fill in the absence of their entertainers, Miss Ruth Armstrong and her double quartet presented an enjoyable impromptu program after they returned from a dinner engagement in Brea. The eight men of the quartet, who will go to Denver early in July for a concert engagement, are Alex Gerraway, Lyle Anderson, Fitz Gibbs, Willard Bassett, Hugh Rummels, Dr. K. H. Sutherland, Walter Viera and Jack Miller. They included in their program some of the numbers which they will give in Denver.

The Long Beach club was also to have installed the incoming officers of the local club, and in their absence, Mrs. W. B. Snow, a prominent member of the Santa Ana group, did the installing. Those taking over offices at this time were:

Mrs. Leslie Steffensen, president; Mrs. Thomas Willis, first vice-president; Mrs. Snow, second vice-president; Mrs. Emil Wagner, third vice-president; Miss Beulah Parker, secretary; Mrs. Jay C. Hamill, treasurer; Clarence Gustafson, evening program chairman; Mrs. Marguerite Ludlow, his hostess; Mrs. Zoe Glenn Sumner, parliamentarian; Mrs. Pearl Livey, song leader, and Milton Foster, sergeant-at-arms.

Community singing was led by Mrs. Willis, who will be program chairman next year, accompanied by Miss Beulah Parker. Places for the club members and their guests were laid at one long table centered with mixed spring flowers and burning tapers.

QUILL PEN AT SMITH HOME

Assisted by her daughter, Mrs. Carlton Smith, Mrs. Annette Smith entertained members of the Quill Pen club Monday night in her home on North Broadway.

The members contributed to the program with reading of original manuscripts, Mrs. Frank was reading a one-act play which is to be produced locally by Gladys Simpson Shaffer, and Mrs. Kenneth Adams three short poems and a number of greeting card verses which recently have been sold.

Mrs. Maynard Thompson of Anaheim, a bride, was welcomed back after an absence from several meetings. At the close, Mrs. William Fritcher poured tea and Mrs. Kenneth Adams, coffee, at a long, attractively appointed table from which refreshments were served. Red roses decked the rooms of the home.

Ice Cream Baked In Cake

By JUDITH WILSON
Spring desserts should be attractive, light and cool. Concentrate on fresh fruits when ever you can. Strawberries, of course, top the list whether you serve them just as they come with cream and sugar or use them in a fuzzy icebox cake or Bavarian cream. Sections of pink grapefruit, arranged like a pinwheel around a heap of powdered sugar and sprinkled with a few minced mint leaves make a simple but lovely ending for a substantial meal.

Baked Alaska
This dessert is easy to make and unusually attractive. For the base, make the following simple cake recipe. Cream $\frac{1}{2}$ cup butter, add 1 cup sugar and cream together until light and fluffy. Add 2 whole eggs, one at a time, beating vigorously after each addition. Sift together $1\frac{1}{2}$ cups cake flour (sifted before measuring) and 2 teaspoons baking powder. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring to $\frac{1}{2}$ cup milk and add to the creamed mixture alternately with the flour. Bake in a greased 9x13-inch cake pan for 25 minutes in a moderately hot oven.

For the meringue beat the whites of 8 eggs until stiff but not dry. Then add 16 tablespoons powdered sugar, a tablespoon at a time. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla flavoring. Immediately before serving put a timothy frozen quart brick of ice cream in the center of the cooled cake and trim, leaving an inch all the way around to serve as a base for the meringue. Spread quickly with the meringue and place in a very hot oven for 5 minutes.

Banana-Coconut Rolls
Peel 6 firm ripe bananas and roll in 2 tablespoons lemon juice and then shredded coconut. Place in a well-buttered baking dish and bake in a moderately hot oven 15 or 20 minutes or until the coconut browns and the bananas are tender. Serve hot with lemon or other fruit sauce.

To make the lemon sauce mix $\frac{1}{4}$ cup sugar and 1 tablespoon cornstarch. Add 1 cup boiling water gradually, stirring constantly. Boil for 6 or 7 minutes. Remove from the heat and stir in 2 tablespoons butter, $1\frac{1}{2}$ tablespoons lemon juice, a few grains salt, a few gratings of lemon rind and a speck of nutmeg.

Raspberry Pie
Try this recipe on your husband if he is a year-round pie enthusiast. Cut 15 rings of canned pineapple into small wedges. Arrange in a deep pie plate that has been well buttered, alternately with 2 cups fresh raspberries which have been sprinkled with 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Sprinkle $\frac{3}{4}$ cup sugar that has been mixed with 2 tablespoons flour between the layers of fruit. Top with rich pie pastry and bake for 30 minutes in a hot oven.

Happy Birthday

The Journal today congratulates:

Meringue On Deep Dish Cherry Pie!

NEW YORK.—A dainty dish for tempting appetites is Deep Dish Cherry Pie. It is, according to Joseph Fleuriot, pastry chef of the Waldorf-Astoria, one of the most popular of all desserts. Just plain cherry pie, he points out, is delicious, but deep cherry meringue pie has that certain something!

Right now, too, he says, is an ideal time for it. Cherries are here, primed for pies!

Do be careful though in making your deep dish cherry pies warns Fleuriot. It isn't that they are hard to make, he explains. It's just that one must have patience and remember that the preparation of the crust, the cherries, and the meringue are all equally important and require equal care.

Deep Dish Cherry Meringue Pie—Waldorf By Fleuriot (6 Servings)
Sift two cups full of fine white flour, add one half ($\frac{1}{2}$) teaspoonful of salt and two-thirds ($\frac{2}{3}$) cup full of good cold lard, cut with knife and mix with flour adding about two-thirds ($\frac{2}{3}$) cup full of water. When well fixed, flour your board and roll. Line bottom of your deep pie dish.

Cherries
Wash and pit about one quart of fresh ripe cherries, poach them in own juice, adding two or three tablespoonfuls of sugar according to taste and a small quantity of water if necessary, also one tablespoonful of heated Kirsch syrup which will give the pie an unusually fine nutty flavor. Place cherries in pie dish and bake for 30 minutes in a medium hot oven.

Meringue
Beat the whites of six eggs until they are stiff, sprinkle with two (2) ounces of powdered sugar, mix well and beat. When your pie is baked, remove from oven, add the meringue on top and place in oven until the meringue is browned. Pie may be served hot or cold.

ED WYNN TAKES SECOND WIFE

NEW YORK. (AP)—Ed Wynn, stage, screen and radio comedian, married Miss Frieda Mierse yesterday in the chapel of the city's marriage license bureau.

Wynn was divorced by his wife last month at Reno.

His bride said she was born in New York city July 11, 1911, and was the daughter of Adolph Mierse. She said she had divorced her first husband, William Doerge, here in January, 1932.

Hollywood SIGHTS and SOUNDS
By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Deanna Durbin is a sweet child and a sweet singer but she doesn't know yet all there is to know about acting. So Henry Koster tells her, like a varsity cheer leader.

Koster, whose pleased and pleasant expression might be there even if his "Three Smart Girls" hadn't been a surprise hit, is a young man who puts his soul into his work. He's making "100 Men and a Girl," and it's the most amusing set in Hollywood today.

The set represents an enormous garage turned into an impromptu rehearsal hall by Adolphe Menjou and his 110 musical recruits to symphony. Menjou plays the trombone and sponsors Deanna. The hopes of all, including Mischa Auer as a musician, are set on so impressing wealthy Eugene Palette that he'll play angel and take over the orchestra. Palette admits the good but folds up his wings. He'll take over, he says, only on condition they get Leopold Stokowski to conduct. (This being a movie, and Universal having arranged all that months ago, you don't need to worry about the outcome.)

But this particular scene is the build-up to the angel's ultimatum: the entrance of Palette. Menjou and Deanna and the musicians—real ones selected for type—are all overjoyed in their welcome. They play "He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and blares and flourishes on the trombone while Deanna urges more pep.

But it's Koster who has the pep. He "conducts" the orchestra, keeps time with feet and arms and body, which all seem to wave and gyrate with the music and enthusiastically. He calls for take after take, between whiles coaching Deanna, who seems too poised, in the art of showing real excitement. He speaks not in a roar but gently, demonstrates what he means by getting down on his knees and pleading. His idea gets over. The last take is good. And Koster has never once lost his temper or yelled. He seems to be having too good a time to think of it.

Herbert Mundin used to work for a theatrical manager who chose play titles deliberately to bait critical wisecracks. He liked especially a piece called "Yes" because the critics could say "No." (They did.)

Mundin is working now in a picture called "That's My Story." But under the preview we won't know whether he's stuck with it.

TRENT IN STAR COLBERT HIT TO DEBUT HERE END TONIGHT

Laverne Brown, the Orange man who quit his job as an airline transport pilot to enter the movies, makes his debut as a leading man in the films in "A Doctor's Diary," which heads the double bill coming to Walker's theater tomorrow for an engagement of three days. His film name is John Trent.

"A Doctor's Diary" is a stirring drama of corruption and neglect in a hospital, the very place where it should least be expected. Trent as a young physician tries to revolt against the conditions he sees around him, but he finds social forces, in which his society sweetheart is linked, aligned against him to retain those conditions.

With Trent in the cast are Helen Burgess, George Bancroft, Molly Lamont, Sidney Blackmer and Ra Hould.

The other feature on the bill is "Hills of Old Wyoming," another of the popular Hopalong Cassidy stories starring William Boyd. It is a story of cattle rustling and ranchers' wars, with reservation Indians holding the balance of power.

Boyd is supported by George Hayes, Russell Hayden, Stephen Morris and John Bead.

A colored cartoon, "Bosco and the Grates," and a newsreel round out the program.

Elaine Barrie Angered By Suit

DETROIT. (AP)—Elaine Barrie, billed here as Elaine Barrie Barrymore, expressed indignation over a suit filed against her in Los Angeles.

"They can't sue me," said the actress, in commenting on a petition for an injunction to prevent her appearance in a movie, "How to Undress in Front of Your Husband." She is appearing at a Detroit theater.

"The film was started some time ago," Miss Barrie said. "I had a part in it but left the picture."

MARX BROTHERS COMEDY HERE

Come early, and be prepared for the maddest and merriest evening you ever spent in theater.

That was the advice given local theater-goers today by Manager Lester J. Fountain of the West Coast theater, who called attention to the fact that "A Day at the Races" with the Marx Brothers opens an engagement tonight. Because of the length of the program, which features a second film, "That I May Live," showtime is 6 p. m.

The Marx Brothers comedy, hailed as the maddest and most amusing picture the comedians ever produced, boasts a stellar cast featuring Maureen O'Sullivan in the feminine lead, Allen Jones singing several new songs, Margaret Dumont, Leonora Kealey, Douglas Dumbrille, Charles Trowbridge, Esther Muir and others.

Plot of "A Day at the Races" shifts from a sanitarium to a race track, and introduces Groucho Marx as a horse doctor who takes charge of the sanitarium; Harpo as a jockey, and Chico as a race track frequenter who peddles good ice cream and bum tips. On top of the comedy comes thrills and excitement when Jones' horse wins a steeplechase in novel and typical Marxian manner. That I May Live, a dramatic romance which tells of a young couple who desperately cling to each other, although love to them must mean flight, danger and fear. They go from trailer camp to trailer camp in an effort to keep out of the hands of police until the young husband can clear himself of a framed-up murder charge.

What Causes These Jangling 'Nerves'?

Anne is one of the thousands of women who ask despairingly, "What are 'nerves'?"

What is this ailment that makes a wretched, middle-aged invalid out of a vital young woman?

"Nerves" are not so much an illness as a symptom, doctors say. They are a warning that something is out of gear, emotionally or organically.

In Anne's case, the emotions are at fault. As a young girl she had few problems to solve. Now, as a married woman, she worries day and night over even ordinary responsibilities. This inner turmoil breaks out in "nerves."

An understanding of herself is the first step in Anne's recovery. Then regular rest and play—to give her the vitality she needs to meet her problems with calm, good humor—and a will!

Find out what causes your nerves. Our 32-page booklet gives advice from a well-known physician, a sane health program. Send 10c for your copy of "Overcoming 'Nerves' and Every-Day Health Problems" to The Santa Ana Journal, Home Service. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

GAINES

This was written yesterday afternoon, but I'll bet we have it at the Coast Association meeting last night!

I'd hate to appear interested in anything concerning a fishing preserve for Orange county, but that might be discussed at length. And, good news comes from our district attorney, who says that maybe the county can have its own preserve, if the state doesn't want to do anything about it.

The proposition is to enact a county ordinance which would keep out purse-seiners. And, if such a thing goes over, I hope our local lights won't include an "act of God" clause such as was offered in some bills in the legislature. That clause stated that if nets broke away and drifted into closed areas, seiners could follow and bring 'em back again. The result of such legislation is easily seen. Half the time the netters would be chasing their nets into preserves and bringing them back filled with fish.

Once there was some talk about a city ordinance at San Clemente governing seining, but lawmakers found out they had to have a legal resident on the water before they could annex it to the city.

I still think they might anchor someone out there in a houseboat for the legal period, then annex the territory and bar seiners. In fact, I'd like to apply for the houseboat job!

Speaking of such things, a certain admiral from Placentia, California, by the way, whom I don't dare mention in this column or he won't take my yachting.

He's buying spare parts for his boat, so's to keep minnows alive until he gets to where he wants to go fishing. I'm looking forward to utilizing some of that equipment, because I haven't mentioned any names, have I?

If I have any luck I'm going to call on Judge John Landell down at San Juan Capistrano this afternoon. I've given the judge better than a month to think up something for me to print. The only trouble with that arrangement is that he writes down things to tell me and then loses the paper!

But, if you ever want to spend a pleasant afternoon learning things about the past in this county—unless you've received a speeding ticket—drop in and see the judge. He knows all sorts of things about everyone's past around here!

Poor old Bill Gallienne! The wild thrush of the Huntington Beach swamplands no sooner gets through with a trailer convention than he starts working on his annual Fourth of July celebration.

As usual, he's enthusiastic. And he should be, especially about the Fourth business. It's getting to be a habit to think of Huntington Beach when you think of the Fourth of July. His parades always are good, and the fireworks are good, and the bathing girls, but Bill also does a good job there, too!

This year, he said proudly the other day, the theme of the affair is going to be navy-cal, or something like that, with lots of vaudeville, crowning of queens and such. You'd better start making plans early, and arrive a couple of days before the show, if you want a front seat!

Haven't heard anyone clamoring for my little friend, the black-and-white fox terrier that someone can have free if they'll speak up and prove they're worthy of owning such a critter.

This animal is young and not too foolish and wants a home and was his tail all the time. C'mon, somebody!

What's this rumor they're pitching horseshoes on the "lake" formerly occupied by the Brea Yacht club?

I'm afraid to mention the situation much up there, because Mark Sarchet always jumps on me right afterward in his column, but it seems like they'd try to have an all-year club, rather than just a wet-winter organization as at present. Every time we have a Santa Ana wind or a freeze, the yacht club sailing grounds—or should I say stamping grounds?—are closed to all competition.

And then Postmaster Mike Hogue and Admiral Glenn Curtis have to go mud-cat fishing or something instead!

COUNTY GRANGE TO GREET NATIONAL HEAD AT ANAHEIM

TABOR TO BE SPEAKER AT MEETING

600 Members Expected to Welcome Officials at Meeting Thursday

ANAHEIM.—Grangers from all parts of Southern California will converge on Anaheim tomorrow night.

The occasion will be the first official appearance of National Grange Master L. J. Tabor in this part of the state.

Tabor will be the honored guest of Granges of the Southland at a big meeting scheduled to be held in the Concordia club, Anaheim, tomorrow night at 7:30 o'clock, it was announced today by Master Robert Wardlow, Tabert, of the Orange County Pomona Grange.

The speaking program will be preceded by a pot-luck dinner which will start at 6 p. m. It will be an open meeting, to which the public is invited. Grange officials expect a crowd of 500 or 600 persons.

Tabor will be accompanied by State Grange Master George Sehmeyer, Sacramento, on his official trip to Orange county. This meeting will be the only one in Southern California which Tabor will attend. He is in California from national headquarters in Washington, D. C., in the interests of Grange work.

The Grange national committee will meet in Los Angeles in conjunction with directors of the Farmers Auto Inter-Insurance exchange prior to the Orange county meeting.

The Grange is a fraternal organization, the oldest group of organized farmers in America. The organization was founded in 1867.

Local Grange members are planning to attend a state convention at Modesto, Oct. 19, at which time efforts will be made to get the 1938 convention for Riverside.

LEMON TOUR IS ANNOUNCED

LA HABRA.—Treatment of frost injured lemon trees will be the theme of the annual lemon growers' field day, announced for next Friday, June 18, at La Habra.

Invitation is extended to all lemon growers of Orange county to attend. Farm Advisor Harold E. Wahlberg, who is in charge of the field tour, said today, the field tour will start at 9:30 a. m. and close promptly at noon. Various spots and demonstrations during the tour will endeavor to answer many current questions regarding proper handling of the young and old trees in regard to pruning and irrigation. The program committee, consisting of C. Jack Zinn and R. F. Frantz, will assist in the demonstration.

Soil moisture tests will be made in the orchards visited, and methods of pruning exemplified. The field day is annually conducted by the Agricultural Extension service in cooperation with the Citrus Department of the farm bureau.

Growers are asked to assemble promptly at the Smith orchard located at the corner of Central Avenue and La Mirada streets, about one mile west of La Habra.

TUSTIN SCHOOL BANQUET HELD

TUSTIN.—The annual junior-senior banquet of Tustin High school was held Tuesday evening at Lakewood Country club at Long Beach. The banquet, the most important social event of the school year, was given by the juniors for the graduating class.

ORANGE WOMEN HAVE MEETING

ORANGE.—The last indoor meeting of the season was held by the Business and Professional Women's club Monday night in the American Legion hall. The unit will hold meetings outdoors during the summer months.

In a business meeting after the 6:30 o'clock dinner, which President Florence Boosey conducted, it was voted to omit the first July meeting, to join with the chamber of commerce-farmers' picnic, July 15. The next meeting will be June 28, a steak-bake at Irvine park.

By-laws were amended to permit a charge of $5 per year as dues. An executive board meeting was announced for Monday evening, June 28, at the home of Miss Florence Boosey, 413 South Grand street.

In games of bridge which followed, Miss Bertha Young won high score in auction, and Mrs. Merle Schildmeyer in contract.

151 GRADUATE IN ORANGE CEREMONY

ORANGE.—Dr. Walter F. Dexter, state superintendent of public instruction, was speaker at commencement exercises last night on the high school athletic field, during which 151 seniors were graduated.

Choosing as his topic "By What Standards Shall We Measure Success?" Dr. Dexter said that the question resolves itself into two parts: how can society improve itself without stifling the individual, and how can the individual succeed without disrupting society?

He spoke of the equity of opportunity which gives a chance to education available in this country, and said the answer to the second part of the question lies in service by the individual, and cooperation with his fellow men.

Preliminary music was played on the "Hymns of the World" and broadcast to the field. Juniors holding American flags made two lanes through which the seniors passed to the platform on the field. Llewellyn Williams sang, accompanied by Dale Curry, and a sporable senior composed Phyllis Kogler, Dorothy Franke, Helen Tabert, Stella Crist, Harold Welch, Norman Dewes, Adolph Lemke and Anzac Jacobs sang. The Rev. William Holder, pastor of the First Christian church, gave the invocation and benediction.

Howard Bonebrake, class president, presented the class gift to the school, a field telephone system to be used in connection with the score board, and $50 to the student loan fund.

J. W. Evans, president of the school board, who has served on the board for 18 years, presented diplomas for the last time, as he is retiring this year from the board. Principal A. Haven Smith presented the class.

Mrs. C. O. Petty, principal, and Mrs. W. H. Bates and Mrs. H. W. Hawes, directors, Mrs. R. R. Lightner was the installing officer.

John Tuffree, world traveler, spoke, on "Women Under Many Flags." A buffet style luncheon was served in the garden of the Bradford home. A business session during which chairmen of the various committees and officers gave their annual reports, followed the luncheon.

FOUR SPEAK AT JAYSEE RITES

FULLERTON.—Four graduates, introduced by the president of the classes of 1937, last night were speakers for the 23rd commencement exercises of the Fullerton District Junior college at the school auditorium, which was filled to capacity for the occasion.

These four young people told of "Self Portrait of the Class of 1937," and were presented by Vernone Branson, president. They were Winifred McCool, who told of gathering materials for the questionnaire, to present the character, the political beliefs, the philosophy, and occupational attitudes of the group. Woodrow Smith told of the anticipated occupations; Dorothy Cline of the philosophy and religious beliefs, and Matthew Walker of the political anticipation, and the prospects of making thinking citizens.

The program included a group of organ prelude numbers played by Miss Murtle Klant; invocation by the Rev. W. Grant Smith; the permanent statement was by Fred Johnson.

After presentation of awards by W. T. Boyce, dean of the school, and the presentation of the class to Louis Plummer, head of the schools, the degree of associate of arts was conferred.

PARTY HONORS TEACHERS

YORBA LINDA.—Miss Helen Walker entertained at tea Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Walker, for teachers of the home economics department and the Girls' league advisors of Fullerton Union High school.

Guests included Miss Emma Kast, Miss Henrietta Helm, Miss Rowena Taylor, Miss Carrie Cultra, Miss Dorothy Turner, Miss Dena Loomis, Miss Ina Gerritt, Miss Marjorie French, Miss Grace Gray Miller, Mrs. Harold E. Moore and Mrs. Esther Long.

Pastor to Leave Fullerton Post

FULLERTON.—Rev. L. C. B. Hill, who has accepted the pastorate of the Chula Vista Episcopal church, and his mother, Mrs. Charles Hill, will be honored by members of the Fullerton St. Andrews Episcopal church with a pot-luck dinner, Thursday at 6 p. m. at Hillcrest park.

The Rev. Mr. Hill leaves Fullerton, where he has been pastor, to take up the duties at the Chula Vista church next week.

Fullerton Negro Poetess Publishes Spirituals

FULLERTON.—Two volumes, each containing six Negro Spirituals, were released to the market by the W. C. Handy Music Publishing company of New York this week.

The stories describing the conditions existing when these Spirituals were evolved have been written by Ruby Berkley Goodwin, Fullerton writer and poetess, while the musical scores were written by William Grant Still and the illustrations sketched by Albert Barbell.

The publishers of the book have bound it in modern music form. In writing the preface, Wellington Adams, musical editor, describes the stories presented by Mrs. Goodwin as "intuitive conception of the anti-bellum negro's traits and peculiarities. She depicts the negro with uncanny accuracy in varying moods of gaiety, sadness, and emotional frenzy common at the time these spirituals were created."

The first volume contains "Gwine Sing All Along De Way," "All God's Chillum God Shoes," "Lissen to De Lam's," "Keep Me From Sinkin' Down," "Lawd, Ah Wanta Be a Christian," and "Great Camp Meeting."

Mrs. Goodwin, best known at present for her poems dramatic sketches and short stories, conceived the idea of these dramatic sketches several years ago when she discovered that, only two generations removed from slavery, she knew little of the spirit of the negro spirituals.

She began a study of them, and evolved these twelve dramatic stories, around which William Grant Still based his musical scores for the production.

Still, now connected with a Hollywood picture studio, is one of the best known of negro composers. His work is recognized over the world. A recent issue of "Etude" contained a long article on him and his work.

Mrs. Goodwin is mother of five children and was reared in Illinois. A recent issue of the New York Times contained a review of her poetry. She is engaged in collecting her many poems in book form, and in writing a novel, "Pure White," which has been scanned, in part, by publishers who have expressed an interest in it.

D. A. R. OFFICERS INSTALLED

FULLERTON.—At the final meeting before summer vacation, installation of officers was held by the Mojave chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at the home of Mrs. A. S. Bradford in La Canada.

New officers installed were Mrs. J. Arthur Miller, regent; Mrs. H. E. Crooke, vice regent; Mrs. W. E. Gunnett, chaplain; Mrs. W. J. Carmichael, recording secretary; Mrs. George Reed, corresponding secretary; Mrs. O. M. Thompson, treasurer; Mrs. William Maple, registrar; Mrs. C. O. Petty, historian; and Mrs. W. H. Bates and Mrs. H. W. Hawes, directors. Mrs. R. R. Lightner was the installing officer.

John Tuffree, world traveler, spoke, on "Women Under Many Flags." A buffet style luncheon was served in the garden of the Bradford home. A business session during which chairmen of the various committees and officers gave their annual reports, followed the luncheon.

Patty Lou Palmer, old-fashioned, hard-working little stenographer in a branch office of the National Insurance Company, never has any "dates" like the other girls and, because she is sweet and good-natured, is frequently kept working overtime. She realizes that she is missing all the fun in life and, one day, when she hears Mardell Gray, the chief office manager, talking about a party she is getting up to go to the Riverview Inn that night, Patty Lou screws up her courage and asks to be included. Mardell contemptuously acquiesces, and pairs Patty Lou off with her own "steady," the hard-drinking Vern Powers, because she herself has designs on the wealthy Dale Northcutt. Vern, drunk and angry, is rude to Patty Lou, making her thoroughly miserable. Dale, who has not been introduced to her, comes to her rescue.

PARTY HONORS TEACHERS

YORBA LINDA.—Miss Helen Walker entertained at tea Sunday at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Walker, for teachers of the home economics department and the Girls' league advisors of Fullerton Union High school.

Guests included Miss Emma Kast, Miss Henrietta Helm, Miss Rowena Taylor, Miss Carrie Cultra, Miss Dorothy Turner, Miss Dena Loomis, Miss Ina Gerritt, Miss Marjorie French, Miss Grace Gray Miller, Mrs. Harold E. Moore and Mrs. Esther Long.

Pastor to Leave Fullerton Post

FULLERTON.—Rev. L. C. B. Hill, who has accepted the pastorate of the Chula Vista Episcopal church, and his mother, Mrs. Charles Hill, will be honored by members of the Fullerton St. Andrews Episcopal church with a pot-luck dinner, Thursday at 6 p. m. at Hillcrest park.

The Rev. Mr. Hill leaves Fullerton, where he has been pastor, to take up the duties at the Chula Vista church next week.

FIELD TOUR IS SET FOR GROWERS

TUSTIN.—Cars will assemble here at 1:30 p. m. Wednesday, June 23, for the annual avocado growers' field day, sponsored by the farm bureau. It was announced today. Several orchards belonging to the Irvine company will be visited on the tour.

Handling and treatment of frost-damaged avocado trees will be the foremost topic of the day's program and field tour. Susceptibility of different varieties to frost also will be explained, as well as observation following the January freeze.

Pruning methods, whitewashing, top-working and other phases of orchard management will be discussed during the day. H. H. Gardner, Orange, avocado department head, announced.

GROVE SENIORS ARE HONORED

GARDEN GROVE.—The Japanese theme was selected by the junior class of the Garden Grove High school for the annual banquet given in honor of senior class members Saturday night, in the school gymnasium. More than 190 students attended.

Tom Sullivan, student body president-elect, acted as toastmaster for the program also presented in true Japanese style. Welcome was extended by Chester Coates, junior class president. Barbara Dales, senior class, responded. Toasts were given by Bob Stronge, Helen Meyer, and Principal L. L. Doig. Noriyuki Masuda sang a solo and a group of Japanese girls of the junior class gave native dances.

Following the dinner program dancing was enjoyed with students not caring to dance going to the Baptist church bungalow for games directed by Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Jordan and Mr. and Mrs. Leland Grove.

FITTED AT DINNER

GARDEN GROVE.—Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Chaffee, daughters Ethel and Winifred and Miss Mettice Chaffee were dinner guests recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gerald B. Hunter in Norwalk.

your name—sweet and good and...

He was interrupted by a terrific bump from another couple. "Beg your pardon," it was Vern's mocking voice. "Couldn't resist bumping you, I'm so burned up over Betty Lou's performance. She didn't dance like that with me! The little deceiver!"

Mardell was with Vern, and the look she gave Patty Lou held hatred. Patty Lou had always stood in awe of Mardell, but now she was changed to fear. What had she done to make Mardell look at her like that?

THE music stopped, and they all started back to the table. "Auntie, with another party called to Dale Northcutt." "Hey, Northcutt! Can you join us for awhile. We won't keep you long."

Dale turned to Patty Lou. "Won't you go with—?" he began. "But Mardell cut in sharply. 'She can't—I want to talk to her.' Then, if only you excuse me," said Dale. "I'll only stay a few moments."

Patty Lou sat down at the table, trembling with happiness and excitement. Perhaps Dale would ask to take her home. He had already demanded the next dance. Vern didn't like her, so he wouldn't be angry.

Mardell's voice, high and sharp, broke in on her thoughts. "That's an old-fashioned girl like Patty Lou to work fast!" "Yeah," said Vern, now assuming an aggrieved air. "And she turns me down for a sap like Dale Northcutt. But you didn't mean it, did you, sweet?" he demanded, leaning toward Patty Lou.

She was nonplussed. "But I thought you didn't like me. I—"

"Honey, I love-o-ove you," Vern droned, in a sort of half-sing, half-speak, and put his arm about her. Patty Lou shivered and moved away, dismayed by this unexpected turn of events.

"But, of course," Mardell was saying. "Dale is so very for you. He's very soft-hearted. We shouldn't have teased. I guess—"

AT that moment, Patty Lou could stand Vern's attentions no longer. She leaped to her feet. "Now, Aunt Lizzie," said Vern. "Don't be like that!"

He swayed to his feet, suddenly caught her in his arms, and kissed her full on the lips. The amused faces of the others seemed to swim before Patty Lou as white-hot anger shook her. Vern... Vern... sallow-faced, hateful... what a sweet! How dared he!

It seemed to Patty Lou that she stood there for an hour in the terrible shame of it, but it was only a split second before her hand was raised, and slapped Vern across his odious, grinning mouth! Then she turned and ran. She didn't know where she was going, only that she had to get away! She couldn't stay! She was determined to torment her!

Outside, she stumbled into a cab and gave her home address. Not until then did she remember that she was to have danced again with Dale Northcutt. Now, she'd probably never see him again.

She huddled in a corner, and sobbed bitterly...

down at Vern. "Sometimes, Vern, you act as though you haven't good sense," he said curtly. There was anger in his dark eyes. "I'll claim the next dance with this young lady and be glad of the opportunity!" "Such gallantry!" Mardell laughed as she spoke, but there

How dared he kiss her! Her hand shot up and slapped him.

"Such a dear little girl," he murmured. "Only I'd have expected to find you on a country lane, or by a chuckling stream in a forest clearing. Do you know what I mean? But you haven't told me your name. All I know is Patty Lou. What's the rest of it?" "P

This newspaper stands for a reunited people, for independence in all things political, and for honest journalism in its news and editorial columns.

Santa Ana Journal

Published daily except Sunday by John P. Scripps Newspapers at 117 E. Fifth Street, Santa Ana, Calif. Braden Finch, editor; E. F. Elstrom, business manager.

Subscription rates: By mail, $7.50 a year; by carrier, 65 cents a month; from newsboys and news stands, 3 cents a copy. Entered as second-class matter May 1, 1935, at the postoffice of Santa Ana, California, under the Act of March 3, 1879.

A Flimsy, Cruel, Political Alibi

THE Republic Steel corporation's suit to force the post-office department to deliver food to strike besieged workers in its Niles and Warren, Ohio, plants should decide at least one thing—and that is whether the C. I. O. or the United States government is running the post-office.

So far Farley's aides have offered as a flimsy excuse for not delivering the mailed food that it is "irregular" service.

Such an alibi deceives no one. When a parcel containing legitimate contents is mailed to a legitimate destination with the right amount of postage prepaid—the law provides that the postoffice must deliver it.

And if delivery is refused for what is patently a political reason by some political job holder, it's time for the American people to get busy with an axe.

The government has fed strikers many times in various parts of this country at the taxpayers' expense on the plea that men, women and children must not be allowed to starve because of a labor dispute.

But the postoffice is deliberately allowing workers in the Republic Steel plants to starve by the refusal to deliver packages of food mailed to them.

How does Mr. Roosevelt reconcile this astounding situation?

Is it wrong, in his opinion, to starve a striker but right to starve a non-striker?

Executions of Russian generals indicate that advancement is easy in the Red army, whether it is from the ranks to a generalship or from this world to the next.

Congress and the Relief Problem

THE RECENT debates in congress on the new relief appropriation indicate one thing pretty clearly: Congressmen don't understand the subject.

That is why they were unable to stem President Roosevelt and Administrator Hopkins in the demand for $1,500,000,000 to spend as free and easy as they pleased. Although many congressmen opposed the idea and wanted to earmark one-third of the sum, they were unable to prove that their suggestion would make matters better or that it wouldn't make them worse.

Most people are pretty well fed up on the present hit-or-miss relief system, and want a change to a better and cheaper way of doing things.

Since it is the responsibility of congress to provide this improvement, our legislators had better get busy and collect the necessary facts to work from.

For until congress is equipped with these facts, it is not competent to install a better relief system. And until a better relief system is installed, attempts to slash appropriations or divert money to other channels might simply result in denying help to people who undoubtedly need it.

The more we hear about the war in Spain, the more we wonder what they are making the world safe for.

Keeping the Purpose Clear

CONGRESS seems to be waking up gradually to the dangerous provisions of the original "war profits" bills.

The senate military affairs committee has deleted from its measure emergency powers over industry which the President might have exercised in advance of war.

The house military affairs committee has taken all draft provisions out of its bill, eliminating labor's fear that it too might be conscripted and its wages fixed. It has guaranteed freedom of the press in war as well as in peace. It has turned thumbs down on the pernicious wartime tax originally proposed which would have let industry keep all its peacetime profits and 5 per cent additional without paying a war tax.

If the two bills are revised in the senate finance committee—as seems probable—to provide drastic income and corporation taxes in event of war they may eventually accomplish the purpose professed by their sponsors, to take away from industry the hope of profit from war.

Unless this is accomplished, it would be better to have no law.

The smart fellow is one who attends to nobody else's business except when he is on their payroll.

It's a Job for Every Citizen

CONFIRMATION from Congressman Sheppard in Washington that congress has allotted funds for Orange county's water program just makes the fact more emphatic that this area will be nicked out of $13,000,000 federal money unless it passes the $2,500,000 bond issue.

For if the election fails to produce the needed two-thirds majority in favor of the bonds, Congressman Sheppard reports that Uncle Sam will withdraw his kind offer of generous financial help.

Orange county would then find its 50-year-old dream of flood control and water conservation broken like a bubble.

Every citizen can afford to name himself as a committee of one to vote for the bonds on July 27.

Is Citrus Getting Black Eye?

NO WISER step has been taken on the frozen fruit marketing question than that of the state department of agriculture in sending a representative East to find out what consumers across the continent actually think of the kind of citrus they are buying.

Some reports say the public is satisfied with the quality of the fruit; others say dissatisfaction is running high.

Obviously the thing to do is to learn the truth by a close, accurate survey. And then, from these facts, to outline a cure which will ensure only good fruit going to market.

Constance Collier has her charm, biting wit and often outrageous upsetting of the convention become the Mrs. Pat Campbell on this side of the Atlantic. Any tea party that can entice her to the ringside is made. It will likely wind up with a whoop.

Like Mrs. Campbell, too, she goes nowhere without some fantastic looking dog. Sometimes a Peke, other times a Sealham or maybe a mastiff. I believe it was Noel Coward who said of one of her newest canines that it smelt like a drain.

Miss Collier, English born, has divided her time between New York and London and is equally well known on both sides, but it is America, many think she prefers. Large of stature, she is at first meeting, shy, shrinking, but if she takes to you and turns on her charm you are her slave from then on!

Many think her autobiography a few years ago is one of the most revealing written by a performer.

The new types of satiny night club and snack bar so glorified by the Louis Sobols and Ed Sullivan have proved acceptable spring boards from which society girls may take off in their ambitions to act. Among the successful are Eve Symington, Peggy Lynch, Adelaide Moffett, Julie Gillespie and several others whose names escape me. It might seem that most of them were depending on a Four Hundred background to put them over, but I have seen nearly all and there's not one who could not hold the spot with her own ability.

I believe some of the most lasting impressions I have of crack entertainment value have come out of the flossy cafes. They are flushing out more real talent than the stage and movies, and had vaudeville displayed the same acumen in new finds it would not be where it is today—in the ash can. I think especially of the mimic, Shelia Barrett, the amazing blind pianist, Ed Templeton, the ventriloquist, Edgar Bergen, Fray and Bargatell, the versatile twin pianists, Eddie Garr, the impersonator, and of course, Ruby Keeler, George Raft, Bing Crosby, and probably 20 other stellar names came out of the night moose.

Whenever I see the term "boundless energy" as I did a moment ago—I think of Will Rogers. His wife Betty once told me she had never known him to appear fatigued or to admit he was tired. From the moment he arose in the morning—and he liked a m. as a rising hour—he was in constant fidget. He liked to read newspapers and morning mail walking up and down. If he had to sit in a chair he was in perpetual squirm, tearing up bits of papers or ruffling back his hair and crossing and re-crossing his legs. His furious chewing of gum was another indication of the strange restlessness, his jaws often in constant motion from the time he got up until he retired. He could think best in action and that was why he always thought his better monologues were those that he delivered while twirling the lariat. After his first airplane flight he told me that forever afterward riding on something as slow as an express train was absolute torture.

The most consistent newspaper smugler continuing to be the actress Katharine Hepburn. It began with her irritation when she was badly pilloried in her first stage performance—a terrific flop. She was young, tender and very sensitive, and has never forgiven any branch of the press, no matter what part of the country. Although her original tormentors were dramatic critics and not reporters, she cannot be mollified and rarely fails to slam doors in their faces whenever besieged. Many actresses who indulged such tantrums later longed for the postscriptal slap. It may even happen to Miss Hepburn. Life is often like that.

Etude: Now and then something comes over most of us. When it comes over me I pop into a florist shop and come out adorned with a bright lily flower. I had one of my spells this morning and as I emerged a romantic ash cart driver with spring in his heart and a discarded posey tucked behind his ear, called out with a grin: "You and me, buddy."

BRIGHT MOMENTS

Edmund Burke, the eminent Irish statesman, was once prepared to deliver a speech in the house of commons upon a very controversial subject. Burke's brilliance was never questioned, but there were times when he became over-zealous and spoke for a longer period of time than the average member believed necessary. Consequently, when he arose, with a bundle of papers under his arm, a rough-hewn member started up and said: "Mr. Speaker, I hope the honorable gentleman does not mean to read that large bundle of papers and to bore us with a long speech in the bargain."

The Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON.—The national labor relations board will shortly issue two of the most momentous rulings in its turbulent history. Both will directly affect, though have no immediate connection with, the current C. I. O. struggle with the independent steel companies.

The board's decrees will:

1. Require employers not only to bargain collectively with their workers but to enter into agreements with them.

2. Hold that minority groups of workers cannot ask for separate agreements but must abide by the terms negotiated by the majority union.

Both rulings will go squarely to the heart of the present wave of strikes. They will also tackle issues which the board so far has cautiously side-stepped.

Since the days of the famed Section 7A of the NRA, unions have complained that certain employers were evading compliance with the law by going through the motions of bargaining with them but refusing to sign contracts, and by secretly instigating minority unions which demand separate agreements. Weighted down by injunctions, the board ducked a showdown on these issues until the supreme court had passed on the validity of the collective bargaining act.

DOUBLE-MEANING
The court's recent decision, while upholding the law, did not conclusively settle the question of the compulsion on employers to sign contracts.

In his majority opinion, Chief Justice Hughes declared, "... the act does not compel agreements between employers and employees..." The labor board and certain employer elements differ sharply on the exact meaning of this language.

Employers interpret it to mean that as long as they allow their workers to organize and negotiate with them, they have complied with the letter of the law. They claim they do not have to sign contracts. They assert that such an interpretation makes a sham and mockery of the law.

It holds that Hughes did not intend to give employers a loophole to avoid entering into agreements with unions, but was enjoining the board to bargain with the terms on which they had to get together.

SECRET CONSPIRACY
The dispute is not an academic one. The board is convinced that this is the nub of most of the labor-employer battling now raging in many sections of the country.

It has confidential information that several weeks ago two national industrial organizations, after careful study of Hughes' decision, secretly advised their union members to refuse to sign any agreements. By this stratagem they counseled, employers could stay within the law and at the same time combat the unionization of their plants.

Forces this under-recover attack into the open and bring a showdown on its powers, the board has decided to kill two birds with one stone:

1. Exclude minority unions from the operation of the Wagner act.
2. Lay down the flat injunction on employers that they must sign contracts after collective bargaining or be subject to prosecution for violation of the law.

"KEEP OUT OF WAR" DAY
If a group of sincere peace advocates on Capitol Hill have their way, June 15 may become a national holiday. It would be called "Keep Out of War Day." The significance of June 15 being that on this day the European nations defaulted on their war debts.

These debts, in the opinion of several senators, are more valuable as a reminder of the futility of war than they are in gold. They can become a national monument, to impress upon the American public every June 15 that wars never can be paid for, never lead to any national advantage, and only lead to other wars.

At present undercover suggestions are being made from Europe for the refunding of the war debts for about 5 to 10 cents on the dollar. These amounts to be paid in goods. The sole purpose of these suggestions is to circumvent the act and borrow more money from the United States, thus rolling up an even greater sum impossible ever to pay off.

In 1915 and 1916 it was the fact that the United States had lent large amounts of money to France and Great Britain through J. P. Morgan which influenced the department toward war.

The revelations of the senate munitions committee irrefutably showed this. Several senatorial leaders now believe that it would be far better to forget 5 or 10 cents on the dollar and set up the entire balance of eleven billions as a national reminder every June 15 to "Keep Out of War."

Sen. Pat McCarran of Reno, Nev., is one of the greatest divorce lawyers in the U. S. A. Even while he is in Washington, and therefore unfamiliar with a case, Pat's law associates sign his name to suits in which they want particularly to impress the court. Pat once was chief justice of Nevada.

The forest service proposed: "Your Forests, Your Heritage, Protect Them." Flagg's slogan was: "Your Forests, Your Fault, Your Loss!"

Townsend revolvers who rebelled against the "Good Doctors" opposition to supreme court reform are setting up a new organization built around the general welfare bill. They plan to take over most of the "I am a Good Doctor" organization in Montana, Oregon, Washington, Idaho and California, where anti-supreme court sentiment is strongest. ... One Man's Opinion

By X REPORTER

No Gloomy Gus am I, and I carry around no load of hopeful fears and fearful hopes. Long ago I learned that to fear the worst is a fairly certain way of bringing the worst to pass. Remember old man Job in the Bible, who, from the depths of his misery confessed, "That which I most greatly feared has come upon me."

Most of us can't equal Job, however, and the worst we can fearfully expect never fully comes up to expectations.

So when folks say to me in doleful tones that the United States of America is half way over some awful precipice, or that another world war is about to gobble us up and our children, too, then I just grin at them and simply say, "I don't believe it; you're just trying to scare me."

Once in a while I let my imagination take a run in the fields of pessimism, just so I may be familiar with the worst that probably never will come to pass.

These days it's quite the popular thing to say that if a man named Green and another man named Lewis do not change their tactics they are going to put the United States into a skid that will result akin to what is happening in Spain.

And do you know what the effect might be if anything like the current Spanish situation ever developed in the United States?

Well, just multiply the tragedies of Madrid, Guernica and some of the other Spanish disasters by about a million, heap the whole world war on top of that for good measure, and you may get a picture of what our America would be at the end of a two or three-year struggle such as Spain is undergoing. "Why," you say, "America wouldn't do anything like that; we are a civilized people."

The sad fact is that Americans, once they had started such a mess, would have very little to say about the result. Armies and ships from a score of nations would rush into the fray to make the world safe for Fascism, Nazism, Bolshevism or some other ism.

America's great gold hoard, the greatest prize ever assembled in the history of the world, would be lure enough, once there was half an excuse for the gun-loaded remainder of "civilization" to start pulling triggers in Uncle Sam's direction.

No, I don't fear anything of the sort. But this is no time for anybody to be playing with gunpowder.

The Mailbag

Public opinion, or what somebody in office imagines to be public opinion, is our ruler. If public opinion is active, the politicians and people sit up and take notice. There is a definite need for outspoken talking and this is a public opinion of our problems is immensely useful. So that every citizen may have his say and contribute to the formation of public opinion, The Journal invites letters to The Mailbag.

SPANISH VICTORIES

To the Editor: Regarding the dispute in The Mailbag over the war in Spain, may I point out the following interesting facts:

The grand total of government victories, calculated to April 19, aggregate to astounding proportions. The government gains in Rebel territory have amounted to 1,500,000 square kilometers, three times the total area of Spain. The government claims to have killed and wounded 2,500,000 of the enemy, capturing 345,000 prisoners. In addition it has captured 415,000 cannons, 775,000 machine-guns and has destroyed 56,779 airplanes.

This list of imposing success is crowned by the capture of Huesca 26 times, of Toledo 11 times and of Oviedo 26 times by the government forces.

These figures were published in the Belgian paper La Metropole. To them might be added the all-decisive and crushing defeat of the Rebels at Brihuega (Russian vs. Italian).

The profound disasters overtaking the Rebels in the overwhelming government advance on Pozoblanco (now relegated to the realm of superstition), the surrounding of the Rebels in the university city beyond all hope of escape for the 10th time, and the countless mutinies, revolutions and counter-revolutions in the ranks of the Rebels.

All these fictions spread by Valencia indicate that the people of the world are being bombarded by victories purely fictitious, their one weapon—propaganda.

Which reminds me of the story they used to tell of a shiftless character in Gallipoli who piled into bed one night, shoes, clothes and all. After awhile his wife shook him: "Get up, you've got your shoes on."

the household, I shall be content." It may be that this new ruler learned humility from his wife. She rules him, he says, "with a hand of iron," and won't let him eat his favorite delicacy, sashimi (raw fish), or drink tea between meals. More likely he learned it from his wise ancestors who knew that power cannot be entrusted to irresponsible upstarts and bragging self-disgraced strong men.

The time is far away that Emerson dreamed of, when "none shall rule but the humble." But Japan's premier shows that it wasn't only a dream.

FAIR Enough

Must Build Highway Or Else!

By Westbrook Pegler

POUNDRIDGE, N. Y. — That man from the government has been around again in our neighborhood, away from it all up the country, insisting that we need a farm-to-market road, and our citizens are up in arms about the matter. He was around a couple of years ago, and we chased him off, but he curled his lip in a sinister leer at he went and said: "Thou haven't heard the last of this, my fine friends. Nobody can let the United States government."

We all thought the matter had just been allowed to drop, but apparently someone has been going over some old papers in Washington and that man is here again.

We haven't got any farms up here away from it all, and the grocery store at the center buys all his tomatoes and parsley and such things from the big market in New York, but the man claims we have got to have a farm-to-market road, even if he has to import a farmer from Kansas and build a market himself.

The neighbors don't want the road, because it would draw traffic to their seclusion, which is what they came to the community for, and the supervisors are playing the chill for the proposition, because the town would have to call for the road, which would run up the taxes and get them in wrong with the voters.

HIS PULL GONE

Some of the neighbors knowing that I go down to Washington pretty often have called around to ask if I can't use a little pull to get that man called off and sent to fight in the far north. I just imagine what drag I have after needing Mr. Big about his income tax exemptions and Jim Farley about the political poor box robbers stuck away in soft jobs.

I used to get that occasional friendly letter from Harold Lokes, but the last time I saw him at the Gridiron dinner he pulled a sour puss on me and walked away, so I guess he must be sore, too. So, probably, if I should go around trying to get them to call off that man and drop his farm-to-market road into some state that has a farm and a market they would call a huddle and build another Golden Gate bridge in front of my place.

This farm-to-market road is going to cost $100,000 or so, as near as we can figure, and we are fixing to build a new school which would cost just that, so I said to one of the boys on the town board, "Why don't you ask the guy to skip the road and build the school instead?"

ONE RADISH A FARM

But he said, "No, I asked him about that, but he says it has got to be a road, and it has got to have a farm at one end and a market at the other. So I told him we didn't have any farm or any market, and he said, 'One radish is a farm, if it comes to that, and one roadside stand is a market, if it buys the radish, so don't be trying to evade the law with technicalities having the color of legality. That is the way with you lousy rich all the time. You haven't got the first instinct of good citizenship, trying to sabotage our beloved President.'"

He found several places where they were growing a tomato or a corn and claimed these were all farms, but our people got a lawyer and made affidavits that these were pets, and there was a ruling of the supreme court that amateur vegetables do not constitute farming in the meaning of the law. But just to play it safe everybody has refrained from growing any suspicious vegetation ever since, and still here the guy is again with his road, and now the neighbors all look on one another with suspicion in fear that some traitor has planted a mess of greens constituting a farm.

IT'S ALWAYS SOMETHING

I suppose there is a lot in the way you treat these people, and maybe it was a mistake to run him off so abruptly the other time, arousing his personal spite, but after all, his approach wasn't any too tactful, either.

He just came in and said, "Where do you want that farm-to-market road built?"

Citizenship and government are getting terribly complicated any way. About that school, that way I understand it. We were going to build a nice school for $40,000, but somebody discovered that the state won't share the burden unless you spend at least $50,000 for the school. So I suppose we are going to build a $100,000 school and load the poor kids down with two and a half times as much education as they need, and probably give them brain fever.

It's always something, isn't it?

THE signs of the Zodiac, which some regard as legend handed down from the ages of superstition and which others regard as symbols of scientific fact, have ever remained a subject which is most interesting to the individual in the cycle of time that encompasses the anniversary of his or her birthday.

It was the ancient belief that every person was influenced by one of the twelve signs of the Zodiac and in the present series the western artist, Milton Monroe, has reduced the symbolism of Astrology to the beauty of colors.

ANCIENT SIGNS OF THE ZODIAC

Persons born between June 21 and July 22, are under the sign of Cancer, the Crab, or the fourth sign of the Zodiac. They are regarded as domestically inclined and possess a strong love for family and home.

Cancer is one of the "Water signs" expressed in the wave motif at the foot of the page. People born under the other "Water signs" will make the best life partners, while those born in the "Earth signs" will make good friends, as "earth and water mix well."

The symbols of the Moon and Jupiter are shown in the lower right-hand corner of the illustration above. If your birthday falls between June 21 and July 22, these are your "lucky stars," according to Astrology.

The two persons symbolized in the drawing have their hands on their chests, the ancient belief being that those born under the sign of Cancer should regard the heart and lungs as their chief strength, while at the same time it was believed that these organs of the body were the most susceptible to affliction.

Ancient symbolism also held that men or women born under this sign must guard against clannishness and timidity, while their finest qualities of character are sympathy and tenacity of purpose.

Queer Trees Imprison Plows, Guns and Mill Wheels

The Above Tree "Swallowed" a Plow That Was Left Leaning Against It. Many Years Ago Someone Placed a Mill Wheel Against a Tree. Result Is Seen at Right.

CERTAIN tropical plants consume thousands of insects every season, but trees that swallow clothes and farm implements sound like a fantastic fairy tale!

Yet in four different states trees have encircled a plow, a man's hat, a mill wheel, and an ancient flintlock!

When young Oliver Childers of Connelly Spring, North Carolina placed his felt hat over a small tree in 1881, the young sapling gradually began to "absorb" the headpiece until now it is solidly embedded and nothing is visible except the worn brim. The process required over half a century.

In the same year an elderly man leaned his plow against a tree near Exeter, Iowa, and went home for dinner.

New tenants occupied the little farm, bringing their own plows, and the old implement was forgotten. Today the plow is fast in the center of the tree, as if a tornado had hurled it through a target.

A great iron mill wheel was left tilted against a small tree about 100 years ago on the land adjoining Bentley Park in Owosso, Michigan. Records show that at this spot an old grist mill was dismantled, and now the rusted rim is securely embraced by the sturdy tree trunk—part of which has slowly grown downward to further encircle the ancient wheel.

Even grave stones have in some cases been swallowed by trees after several generations, but the only case where a tree has "shouldered arms" was discovered on a ranch near Chehalis, Washington. About 15 feet above the ground rests an old-fashioned flintlock, tightly held by the ten-inch oak. Near the hammer of the gun is engraved the date, 1839—some 22 years before the Civil War! Historians report that this was one of the guns sent to the northwestern territory to help in putting down a sudden uprising.

One legend says that a settler placed his gun in the fork of the tree, indicating to approaching warriors that he was unarmed; another says that he used the tree as a gun-rest while defending himself against attack. Whatever happened to the gun's owner, there the weapon remains.

Chicken Mothers Scotties!

A Chicken Mothering Ducks Is Nothing Unusual, But When a Hen Decides to Help Raise Pups—That's Different!

THE maternal instinct is often expressed in strange and amusing ways.

Because this white pullet has no chicks of its own, her broad wings spread over a litter of infant Scotties. The property of Roy B. Conner of Oklahoma City, this protective chicken is fed in the nursery with the puppies, where their real mother seems to feel that the hen makes a good nursemaid and is willing to share her offspring for several hours a day.

"When the puppies arrived," says Mr. Conner, "no one could persuade the pullet to return to the chicken coop. She makes a good feather pillow for the pups and keeps them warm on cold days."

A Live Neckpiece!

A LIVING neckpiece of friendly striped "kittens" is more highly prized by this young lady than a more fashionable silver fox!

These furry young skunks are the trained pets of Louise Eldredge of Salt Lake City, Utah, and were found near her home. Now six weeks old, they are rapidly growing into full-sized animals.

"They'll eat almost anything," she reports, "but seem to prefer eggs, and like to wander into the chicken coop to satisfy their appetite. But if no eggs are obtainable, their dinner may consist of mice, grasshoppers, or other insects."

"They are great playmates," she says, "and romp around like house cats, but always come in at night without being called."

Curlew's Funny Bill

By R. Remlow Harris

"WHY you so sad, friend Curlew, why you no sing um song? Maybe so you sick, huh? Tell um what is wrong." So spoke Willow Whistle to this melancholy bird—who began his sad, sad story. Here's what Willow Whistle heard. "Sad you'd be, too, my Indian friend—had you my ugly beak. Why just the very thought of it gives me the wish to shriek." "You make big mountain out of tip!—Curlew's nose not out of place—Oh, maybe long, but so is Indian's. But why care if fittum face?"

"I do not care," the Curlew said, "Except it hurts my pride. It's really not my beak that hurts—it's something down inside. You see, I tried to help Old Man who one day was in trouble, but just because I failed he tried his best my beak to double. Don't ever aid a faithless man—no thanks dwells in his heart. He'll think you stupid if you help. To cheat he'll think is smart."

Look at my bill! Let it warn you. Be helpful, but with care. Be kind to those who need it—BUT of hypocrites beware. "I learn," said Willow Whistle, "much. Sad words but wise you speak. Before I help false ones I'll think—how you got twisted beak."

Tallest Bandsmen In World!

MEMBERS of the tallest band in the world are native Samoan policemen of Pago Pago, one of the South Seas' most beautiful harbors.

This band—averaging six feet six inches tall!—greet globe-circling aviators on their epic flights from the Pacific Coast. They bid them "fair winds" when the great planes take off—marching along the beach in single file, playing "Fofa Mai Feleni," which means "Goodbye, friend!" Visitors are welcomed with songs rivaling the famous "Aloha Oe" of Hawaii, by natives whose siva-siva dance remains one of the last barbaric ceremonies in Samoa.

Before the United States Naval Bandmaster was recently induced to select the most talented of the police force for his band, the ancestors of these handsome Polynesians imitated wind and storm in gatherings where clapping hands symbolized swaying palm trees, and weird native instruments wailed like a breeze off shore. These proud bandsmen wear regulation uniforms, but at home they dress in a simple lavalava—by wrapping a strip of cloth or native matting around their waists, and securing it by a deft twist.

It was in Pago Pago at Reid's Hotel that Somerset Maugham wrote "The Trembling of a Leaf," which became the stage success "Rain" and the picture "Sadie Thompson."

Gay Throngs—Of Yesterday & Today!

on Evenings of Fun.

THE GAY and hilarious crowds of yesterday danced and dined in little cafes which would be lost in a corner of today's restaurants and night clubs. They waltzed under glaring lamps and sparkling chandeliers in the flowing, graceful feminine costumes of the era. Lillian Russell hats bobbed across the tables, long skirts swept the dance floor, and at midnight hilarity had reached its height. Their pleasures, compared to the entertainment of more recent years, were simple: good food, laughter that rang contagiously around the room, a little music and long hours of dancing. Fun-loving society drove dull care away, forgot troubles and duties to enjoy the hospitality of little cafes which remained open until the sun came up.

These favorite haunts of Jack London, Ambrose Bierce, Joaquin Miller, Frank Norris, the poet George Sterling and other writers have vanished, and the glamorous years of the early West's "night life" are forgotten by all save a few old-time companions of those famous men.

Murky, cobwebbed cafes and dimly lit rendezvous where artists and youthful authors dined and talked by candlelight until the gray hours of dawn, are a fading memory of the romantic past. From the colorful Bohemian cabarets of the gay nineties have sprung the gilded, ultra-modern night clubs of today: now a growing million dollar industry, still expanding, and offering luxuries and entertainment undreamed of by the proud proprietors of those modest "palaces" less than half a century ago.

Singing waiters who earned a precarious living by occasional tips no longer sway past rows of marble topped tables humming the latest tune. Blind musicians hammering out ragtime on battered pianos have made way for ten-piece orchestras. Shriill-voiced sopranos and bespangled cabaret girls no longer beg for applause and a shower of silver coins. The new fashion has created a new "show girl"—talented, highly trained and well paid.

Unless an old-time entertainer reached the heights of popularity, only a bare existence was his or her reward. Chorus girls were paid from $8 to $10 a week, and from these wages purchased their own wardrobe. Musical entertainment included a violin, a piano, in need of tuning, and waiters who took turns at singing sentimental ballads. Many of the first cabarets were rented for a few dollars a month—and both overhead and income were limited.

THE typical modern night club employs skilled interior decorators. Famous artists are engaged to create fantastic wall murals—and the initial cost of many places ranges from $50,000 to $100,000. Luxury is the keynote—an amazing contrast to the old cafes where a pitcher of "fruit punch" was served for a few cents and where covert charges were unknown.

"The luxury of today's clubs," says one prominent night club owner, "is due to the terrific competition. A few of the smaller clubs in western cities took a 'flier,' brought in decorators, and hired new entertainers. That was the beginning. The craze spread—"

"Sentimental ballads were rendered by throaty sopranos, fading tenors sang bits of light opera, or a Negro quartet sang religious 'spirituals'—and the audiences wept freely."

"These new attractions caught the public fancy, and the money poured in."

The secret of a profitable night club is to hold the customers' attention.

"Some clubs, in addition to the regular floor show, feature special sporting events. Fencing teams are hired, badminton experts display their skill, and in one case a table tennis tournament was held among the guests. This particular novelty was thought by this proprietor's advisors to be carrying the 'act' too far. Originality, they said, was splendid in its place, but table tennis on the dance floor would drive patrons away. But when the owner made up his mind to go ahead anyway, arrangements were made."

"The first night customers applauded and cheered the two experts who shot the little white ball across the table, and the tournament was under way. To the amazement of the skeptics, it was a huge success."

"Other sporting events include golf professionals who demonstrate the proper stance, the various swings, how to grip a golf club and other technical points."

"The newest innovation in western night clubs is 'candid camera' occasions. Guests are invited to bring their cameras and snap pictures of anyone and anything. Some clubs give prizes for the most amusing pictures."

"Several new clubs have announced prizes up to $100 a night for the best dressed woman among the guests. A jury is chosen from theatrical patrons and artists, and their selection is final.

"Pretentious fashion shows are not unusual. Professional models clad in the latest Paris and London creations parade across the dance floor—a display appreciated especially by feminine guests."

"The selection of an orchestra is of first importance. Guests come to talk and dance, and the music must be excellent."

"Famous orchestras, composed of 12 to 15 members, today receive from $2000 to $5000 a week for seven nights' work! The average engagement, however, is usually from six to eight weeks. They keep moving around the country, never remaining long in one place. Like entertainers, they draw crowds for only a limited period, their newness gradually pales and other night clubs engage them as a chief attraction."

Visiting celebrities are introduced to the guests by the master of ceremonies, and are welcomed by night clubs as an attraction in themselves. They rise and bow, perhaps speak a few words, and patrons go home thrilled to have seen a famous personage."

Modern night clubs have become an intensely specialized business, in which fortunes are made and lost within a few short months. Grandeur, luxurious surroundings and continually changing entertainment are essential, since they cater to gay crowds that go always to the brightest, newest places.

Strange Faces That "Star" In The Movies!

Whether It's Trained Seal, Lion, Ape Or Cow,
Hollywood Can Furnish All Within Hour

Charley Grapewin Gives the Small Grandson a Ride on the Water Buffalo Used in "The Good Earth." What Child Wouldn't Like to Ride!

TEMPERAMENTAL stars and peevish performers are the bane of a director's existence, but there is nothing quite as exasperating as an animal that won't act. So fertile is the field for intelligent and accommodating vertebrates in Hollywood that animal training farms have grown like weeds around the cinema capital, and some four-footed stars have crashed headlines and billboards to be featured as box office attractions. Past masters at the art were Tom Mix's "Tony," the beautiful stallion "Lightning," "Rin Tin Tin," "Flash," and "Rebel." Tony had two doubles, and it took the three of them to keep Tom Mix in the saddle. Tony played the close-ups and did the tricks while the others were pressed into hard running scenes.

No picture era has been without its notable dog star. For many years it was the almost humanly intelligent German shepherd, Rin Tin Tin, who accomplished deeds of heroism in dozens of silent films, and while several generations of descendants, real and alleged, compose a special dog aristocracy in the film colony, another dog, Buck, a handsome St. Bernard, has risen to take his place.

One of the most remarkable dogs to find his way into pictures in recent years is Tuffy who earns $100 a day for his master. Tuffy is an Australian sheep dog and has one white eye which is characteristic of the breed. He doesn't do tricks. Tuffy has long since graduated from that school. He does what he is told. He was trained by Mr. G. B. Orvedahl on a ranch in South Dakota not for a career, but for a companion to his master. Orvedahl dahl was in poor health and Tuffy did the chores even to such complicated tasks as going into the pasture a half mile or so to bring out a white or black horse according to instruction. He led them by short halter reins specially made for the purpose.

Tuffy has a marvelous repertoire and his master can keep him busy for hours doing everything from climbing trees to stamping out small fires with his front feet. He has made such past successes as "Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "The Moon Is Our Home," "Old Hutch," and "The Mighty Treve."

Silver Wolf, one of the better known movie dogs, has just been signed for the serial "Radio Patrol." Acting seems to run in his family, for he is the son of Dynamite who starred in five pictures on the Universal lot in 1927.

The bull terrier, Tweesey, vies with the best for high honors on the screen. His value is conservatively estimated at $2500. Curly Twiford is the lucky owner but Curly confesses that Tweesey has no pedigree. It is generally agreed among animal trainers that pedigree is no asset and mongrels, not too nondescript, are usually thought more intelligent than thoroughbreds.

Mr. Twiford also owns the cockatoo, Corky, and the parrot, Honey Boy. They are trained to talk, cry, sing, laugh and do tricks. Their earning capacity ranges from $10 to $25 a day, but their work is somewhat irregular and their parts are usually minor.

A recent survey in Hollywood revealed that in comparison with 20,000 extras who were seeking work in pictures there were 2,000 animals. Rouben Mamoulian of Paramount remarks that he has found 12 trick cats—no more, and of those 12, 11 were temperamental—77 trained horses, an indeterminate number of sheep, 7 parrots, 11 ducks, one turkey and an owl. Added to these are the products of Lionel Comport's farm. From him the studios rent milk cows, goats, sheep, chickens, ducks, geese, turkeys, rabbits, house cats, mongrel dogs and sway-backed horses. He received 25c per day per head for 100 geese in the filming of Universal's "When Love Is Young." The studio hires the owners with the animals and they are required to be on the set so that the owner and not the studio will be responsible for losses. Mr. Comport found the hours long where the geese were concerned and he took several days out to rest after a week of herding 100 of them through the picture. "Sheep are a cinch compared to geese," he remarked.

WHEN it comes to cows, directors shake their heads. They can't remember having seen a trained cow. Hil, the East Indian water buffalo in "The Good Earth" was at best a bit of atmosphere, and Cuddles, the 2200-pound bull, in Bing Crosby's "Rhythm on the Range" was just "himself." It will never be known how much Cuddles enjoyed olive oil rub-downs, a personal valet and a cabin trailer.

On the other hand, there's Anna May, as lovely a lady elephant as any director could desire. Year in and year out, Anna May sways before the cameras, and the chances are that she will continue long after the current crop of picture stars and animal faddists have written their memoirs.

Jackie is another favorite. He is the wrestling lion who "plays dead" with masterful accuracy. Jackie, reputed to be the world's best trained lion, recently completed a very important role in Universal's "Jungle Jim." Though the King of Beasts, he is toothless and docile as a kitten, the only big jungle cat that film companies dare to use without the protection of heavy steel bars. Jackie was born in captivity and carefully trained from infancy by Melvin Koontz.

The leopard who plays a counterpart for Jackie in "Jungle Jim" and whose name is Princess, hails from India. She was trained by Albert Allcorn and Olga Celeste, but during the filming of this picture attacked Allcorn who suffered several flesh wounds as a result.

Allcorn was lying in front of the camera at the time of the attack, and according to Miss Celeste it is instinctive for beasts of prey to attack when the victim appears to be disabled or off-guard. The old trapper's adage that a man can save his life when face to face with a bear by dropping to the ground and lying perfectly still is not applicable to jungle cats. These felines are less likely to attack a man who is standing, according to Miss Celeste.

When a dummy was substituted for Allcorn a few minutes after Allcorn was attacked, the leopard tore the dummy to shreds. Princess belongs to the Zoological Gardens. She is valued at $750 and earns $35 a day when she works.

There are many monkeys in moviedom, but the most famous are Josephine and Napoleon. The monkey varieties are the most easily trained and least temperamental of all "career" animals.

There are two classes of animals in Hollywood—plain animals and animal actors. Actors are those sufficiently trained to take cues from behind the camera. Since the inception of talking pictures giving commands has been discarded and animals have to be taught to respond to hand signals. Some of them are trained to react to whistles of such high frequency that they are not recorded by the sound apparatus.

Cuddles (Left) Played With Bing Crosby in "Rhythm on the Range." (Below, Corner) Grant Withers Surveys a Lion Which He Has (Supposedly) Killed.

A Fierce, Man-Eating Tiger of the Movies (Left) Is Viewed at Close Range. Animal Actors Are Usually Well Trained — But Sometimes They Act Their Part Too Realistically!

Making Movies Is Fun for Dogs. They Love the Action, the Excitement and, Directors Say, Are Born Actors.

Hearing Clock Strike 13 Saved His Life!

Sentry Was Sentenced To Death But Big Ben Was Wrong—For Once!

By Bob Edgren, Jr.

SOME very queer incidents have been caused by the severe discipline of military life and in the ordinary course of a civilian's life.

A sentinel named Hatfield who was on duty guarding royalty during troublous times in England was charged with falling asleep. A court martial tried him and sentenced him to death.

Hatfield wasn't guilty. He hadn't been asleep. The trouble was that he had no witnesses to prove it, but stood his ground in court and made a very startling statement which saved his life. "I tell you," he said, "that on midnight of the night when I was said to have been asleep, I heard the bell of Big Ben in the distance."

The court demanded proof. Hatfield agreed to give it. "That night," he went on, "instead of striking twelve times as it usually does, it struck thirteen times."

Big Ben, located in a tower of the Houses of Parliament, is a traditional symbol of British accuracy and reliability. To an Englishman such a charge was the statement of a guilty man desperately trying any ruse to avoid punishment. Hatfield was returned to confinement, and as a matter of form, before his execution, the officials in charge of the big clock were interviewed. They admitted that on the night in question Big Ben had made the rare mistake of striking thirteen times at midnight.

Hatfield lived to be 102. Authorities in this country sometimes make errors, too. On one occasion California was captured by mistake!

In the early 1840's both England and the United States knew that Mexico had only a nominal control over California. Naval officers of both countries were instructed to be on the alert. If a legitimate reason would be shown, U. S. naval authorities were to seize California. The navy men of the United States were particularly anxious because the west coast claims of the small American nation were vague at best; the English had done a good deal of exploring and claiming in the north, and by extending their power southward they might shut off the United States from the entire Pacific Coast.

Commodore T. A. C. Jones of the American Navy was cruising around in the Pacific in 1842 when word came to him that the United States had declared war on Mexico. It wasn't true, but he didn't know that. He landed his marines at Monterey, which was then California's capital. The Mexicans, outnumbered, figured that discretion was the better part of valor and made little resistance and soon the American flag was flying over the old adobe customs house.

Then Commodore Jones scouted around among the official documents and discovered to his chagrin that the two nations were at peace. He apologized to the Mexican authorities, called his marines together, removed the American flag, and set sail. The Mexican Government demanded that Jones be court martialled. The Navy Department knew that he had only attempted to follow orders so Jones was never punished and the credit for capturing California went to Commodore Sloat, who landed in Monterey on July 7, 1846. The Mexicans must have thought it was a pretty well rehearsed show when the marines again landed and ran up the American flag!

STRANGE things can happen when many armed men are under the command of one person. That person need not be an experienced general—history shows many cases where the leader was almost a child. Test your memory: who was the only person holding command over the military forces of a large nation at the age of 17?

It was not Alexander the Great. In fact, this commanding general was a woman and her birthday is still celebrated every year although she lived more than five centuries ago.

Joan of Arc was the woman. Interest in her career still runs so high that she was made a saint in 1919.

Joan capitalized on a very fine bit of psychology which was again used by Napoleon hundreds of years later. She arrived on the scene at a time when a French professional army, not very much interested in what was going on, was backing away from the British. She gave them a noble, romantic ideal to follow. Hers was not a case of a rich noble paying men to fight so that his back yard would be enlarged. She offered them a chance to fight for France—to follow commands from Heaven itself, given to her in visions. It drew men to the French banners and made them fight like tigers.

Napoleon, again appealing to the common man, calling his soldiers "my children," urged them to fight for liberty and equality and to set free the poor, downtrodden people of other lands. His men felt that they really had something to fight for. That the poor, downtrodden people thus liberated were saddled with new governments and new taxes was not mentioned in the pre-battle orations because it would have spoiled the romantic effect of the appeal.

THE effects of war last a long time, sometimes appearing years later where least expected. James P. Sherry, of Rochester, New York, found one leg going lame after he had been out of the army for 15 years. He also had headaches. Dr. Charles S. Gallagher examined him, and on finding something wrong with the eye on the opposite side from Sherry's leg, suspected that the whole trouble originated somewhere in his brain. They took an X-ray photograph of Sherry's head and were astounded at what they saw. On the plate was the image of a jackknife blade. It had been thrust into the brain from the left side of the head. After they had successfully removed the knifeblade, they attempted to solve the problem of how it got there. Sherry remembered that he had been struck in the elbow by shrapnel when he was in the Argonne with the 305th Signal Battalion. He was treated for the elbow injury and no other wounds were noticed. At this period of the war, scrap metal was being used. The knife blade was probably part of the shrapnel burst, going into his skull hot from the explosion and cauterizing the wound it made.

His head was examined carefully and a very fine scar, almost invisible, was discovered.

Yes, the after results of war are peculiar. Take the case of Mrs. Mary Jones. She lives in Newhall, Leicestershire, in England. She kept an old 16-pound shell—with the powder and priming removed—in the house as a war relic.

Mrs. Jones is an old lady of 73, and the cold weather affects her more than it used to. She thought of buying something like a hot water bottle for a bed warmer but her eye lighted on the sixteen pound shell. Just the thing! She put it on the stove and heated it mildly—it made a very good bed warmer! Then, as she was ill the next day, she asked a friendly neighbor to heat the shell for her. The neighbor put it in the oven. This shell—with no powder and no priming in it—exploded and blew the oven door clear across the room!

The air inside the shell had expanded and blown off the cap.

THE idea of a gun shooting around a corner always seems comic. Guns can't quite do that, but they don't shoot straight, either. They put about the same amount of curve on a shell that a good big league pitcher puts on a baseball.

A French "75", for instance, shooting at a range of 4½ miles will throw a curve that makes the shell land 240 yards to the right of where it is aimed. The amount of curve is about 1/33 of the range.

A good big league pitcher like Van Lingle Mungo or Wesley Ferrell can make a fast curve break about a foot and a half on its way to the plate. They can throw a roundhouse that would break more; easily a foot and ten inches. In that case, the amount of curve would be about 1/33 of the distance from the pitcher's box to home plate. And speed? The French "75" is only about ten times as fast as these pitchers. No wonder catchers have their hands all banged up!

One queer and difficult feature about aiming a long range gun is that the rotation of the earth must be taken into consideration. This is because all parts of the surface of the earth do not move at the same speed. For instance, a spot very close to the north pole, like a spot near the center of a phonograph record, moves slowly. A spot on the equator travels at a rate of about a thousand miles an hour. Shooting from the north pole towards a spot on the equator would be like shooting at a flying duck—you'd have to aim ahead of it to score a hit.

The difficulty of hitting a target at long range is shown by the record of Big Bertha. This gun had a range of 76 miles. Shooting at the city of Paris, which is an enormous target, it had an area of two by two-and-a-half miles in which a shell was likely to do serious damage. This area was hit 183 times; it was missed 120 times. When you miss a target two by two-and-a-half miles in size, in spite of the most careful and elaborate calculations, you know that it's hard to shoot straight at such a distance.

The Boy Met And Lost The Girl He Loved—But Sometimes The End Is Only The Beginning

FIVE STAR FICTION

By Mary Gates

THERE was only one person in the exhibition room when Eric entered it promptly at ten—a girl, wearing a yellow slicker belted firmly about a small span of waistline and a shabby brown felt hat. She was standing in front of the "Old Man Napping."

It was the "Old Man Napping" that Eric had come to study. He had glimpsed it once, on Wednesday, but just as he had settled himself to study it he had suddenly heard his father's voice and had fled precipitantly.

Not that he had anything to fear from discovery. His father would not have been displeased to find him there. Quite the contrary. His father would have greeted him with a warm, if somewhat flustered smile.

"Why, Eric! You here? This is a surprise! I didn't know you—"

Strange how his father who could talk so brilliantly, so assuredly, to the most important and impressive was so inept before his own son!

He would reach up—he was somewhat shorter than Eric's six feet of bronzed, string-taut leanness—Eric's mother's wedding ring flashing from the little finger of his left hand, and put his arm about Eric's shoulder, and try to find out.

But Eric did not want him to find out—not about the painting. His father knew so much about Raphaels, Rubens, Rembrandts, and such. His father knew about everything, everyone. Except his own son.

"I don't see enough of you." Every now and then his father said that. "We must get together one of these days. There are a few things I have in mind for you now that you're through with college." Eric had been through half a year—was supposed to be taking a breathing space before settling down to more serious labors. "We've got to decide about things." Eric had decided long ago. "I wish I could make it today." His father's forehead would ridge. "But there's this matter—"

There had been "this matter" ever since Eric could remember, ever since his mother had died. A rest farm for mothers, a white-collar hospital, young men to see on to careers, young women to help. In succession, with never a let-up, they engrossed his father, absorbed him. So that he almost forgot he had a son.

This woman, this Carlys Callender whose technique in etching had evoked such an agitation among the critics, and whose "Old Man Napping" Eric had come to study—his father had found her doing illustrations of hats in a commercial art agency. For weeks now the talk had been all of her. Miss Callender... Miss Callender... His father's voice glowed when he spoke her name.

THE girl in the yellow slicker moved over and made room for him. They stood, the two of them, looking up at the face of an old man, the face of a man who has seen much of life and is content, even willing, to relinquish it.

"It is good, isn't it?" Eric said suddenly.

The brown felt hat turned, tilted, and a face came out of it toward him; a face that he beheld with a little sense of shock, so vivid and young and gold it was. Freckles spangled it, and eyes yellow like a topaz flashed at him out of a tawny skin. Tendrils of crinkly, red-gilt hair rayed about it, like a halo, and he was conscious of a bowed mouth rather large for a face so small. He felt a little staggered. Some place, sometime, in a warm little space of the past, he had known a face like that.

"Well," she said, and there was a limp tinkle in her voice. "Well, I don't know." Her topaz eyes were contemplative. "The mouth, now—I have a feeling that more could have been done with it. Haven't you?"

Eric gasped. The nerve of her! "I—I had thought it rather perfect," he submitted stiffly.

"It isn't," she said quietly. "It's good, but not perfect." Suddenly her eyes were upon him enquiringly.

"You—do this sort of thing yourself?"

"Oh, no!" said Eric, disclaiming. And then added, he knew not why: "I—I paint."

"I see." She turned more directly toward him. "Oils?"

Eric nodded.

"Oils. Though I'm not so awfully hot. I mean, I haven't had any instruction. I've just painted and tried to learn from what others have done."

She digested this slowly.

"That's not such a bad way," she said. "But instruction does help. Saves time, gives you the short cuts. And one needs criticism, impersonal and from knowing sources."

"I know," said Eric eagerly. "But I'll get everything straight this summer. I—see—I'm going to study with Jones."

Her eyebrows went up. "Benton Jones? Then you must be good!" In her eyes he could see a greater regard for him.

He wondered, with an acute sense of longing, whether she would go out to lunch with him if he asked her. He was mustering the courage to put the question when chimes from a nearby church pealed out.

The girl listened. "Eleven o'clock," she gasped. "I've got to fly!"

Panic seized upon Eric. In a minute she would be gone! "I—I'm going too!" He followed her out into the cold. The rain now had changed to a wind-driven snow that came down in an unending curtain of white.

"I say!" Eric cried and stretched out a hand to stay her. But the wind hurled the words back into his throat, and a bus lumbering down the Avenue engaged all of the girl's attention. She went running to get it.

"I say!" cried Eric again. "Wait!"

But she swung up the steps of the bus and it began to rumble away. She turned on the platform and waved her hand to him. Her face came out of the hat, yellow and gold and smiling. The next instant the snow had blotted her from sight.

HE SOUGHT for her. All through that month of March, all through April, way into May. For he would find her. With a certainty inexplicable yet unshakable he knew that. But the winter had been forgotten, and the spring had faded to a soft memory before he saw her again.

It was a Saturday, bright and hot, and his father was doing stunts from the diving board over the pool, surrounded by his week-end guests. Eric stood behind the dotted Swiss curtains in the gardener's cottage and watched. His father, exhausted at last, went and stood beside a lone figure. Eric could not see her face. But it came to him, in some intuitive way, that it was for her that his father had performed.

Abruptly the girl edged over to the pool. A moment later she sprang high through the air, a winging, white-armed bird that dipped and slid in one unbroken, flowing movement into the water.

Eric drew in his breath. That a mere mortal could make so beautiful a gesture!

A shout went up from those about the pool.

"Carlys! Carlys! Do it again!"

Carlys Callender! The woman whose etchings he had gone that morning to see! Thoughts came crowding through his head. There had been a paragraph in a column of chatter. Once someone had even asked him, Eric. A strange pain came at his heart. He did not want his father to marry again, to take someone else into the place that had been his mother's.

He turned from the window and took a path leading to a meadow with flowing, uncut grass. Here he could work in quiet.

THROUGH the tall grass a bright head moved toward him. A face shaped itself, tawny and topaz-eyed.

"Why, hel—low!" she said. Eric's heart began to hammer suffocatingly.

"I've wondered about you," she continued.

"Y—You?" he gasped. "Here?" More than wonder was in his voice; shock, dismay. She was one of his father's crowd! One of the circle who engrossed him and possessed him and absorbed him! But she merely smiled, and threw her arms wide to the sun. "Isn't it wonderful?" she said. All this blue and green and shining gold? I've never envied the rich, but for beauty such as this I could pawn my soul!"

"I say!" cried Eric again. "Wait!" But she swung up the steps of the bus... The Next Instant the Snow Had Blotted Her From Sight.

Her joy was so innocent. Oh, what did it matter if she was one of that hated mob?

He said, his breath fairly strangling him: "I—I called after you!"

She nodded. "I know you did. But I couldn't turn back. I had to get to my job."

He drew in a deep breath, and after a moment, the red flaming up to his hair: "I—hunted for you. I went to the galleries, the exhibits—"

"I didn't go again," she said. They stood there, looking at each other.

"And the class?" she asked. "You attended?"

"I attended," said Eric. "It closed last week."

"You're going on? Jones urged you?"

Eric nodded. "He asked me to come to him in Paris this fall."

The smile that broke over her face was like a sunburst.

"Bully for you!" she cried, and stretched out her hands.

"I knew you'd be glad," he said, grinning back at her. He put his hands over hers, gathered them tight, and at the contact the hard pumping set up in his chest again.

"You—You don't know how I've wanted to see you!" he said. "Oh! I know it must sound—fantastic, that you can see someone once and feel as if—as if all your life before had been just a—a marking time—!" He broke off. "But it can happen?" he begged. "Don't you think?"

"It—might," she said.

His eyes cleared. He took a step nearer. "I—I want you to see something," he said, and drew her toward him, around the easel.

She looked down on the canvas:

on a face alive and lovely beyond any actuality. Her face, and yet not hers; a face painted by a lover's hand. She looked, and slowly a flush rose to her cheeks.

She said, after an interval: "What—are you going to call her?"

"Eve," he said.

"Eve?"

He nodded. "The first woman. The only woman." And looking at her: "You'll always be Eve—to me."

Her cheeks now were like two burning flags of red. She moved from him, sat down. He came and dropped beside her.

"We're—like that, in our family," he said. "There's always just one woman with us, the first." She had clasped her hands loosely in her lap. He reached over and took one.

"Eve," he said, "some day when you know me better, will you—marry me?"

She gave a sharp start. She had not expected this.

"Please!" He pleaded. "Please understand! We two—surely, we two—"

"There'll be a fuss," he added after a moment. "My father, you know. He—has other plans for me."

A wrinkle puckered her forehead. "Your—father?"

He nodded. "My father." He threw out his arm in a gesture that took in the land about them, the far-off house, the pool, the gardens.

Her eyes widened. "Oh!" she said softly.

He turned and faced her. "You'll stick?" he queried anxiously.

She regarded him thoughtfully. "You want me to?"

"Awfully," said Eric.

"But you don't know anything about me," she said.

"I know all I need to know. I knew all that very first day. I—He couldn't go on. Oh! How did you say to a girl that you loved her? Suddenly, as he struggled for words she leaned toward him.

"That anyone could be so heart-starved!" she said. And kissed him. Then, before he could stop her, she scrambled to her feet and was gone.

NIGHT came, hushed and cool and magic after the heat of the day, and in the drawing-room Eric wandered like a lost sheep.

At last he saw her, coming into the room from the hall. At her appearance several men rose and headed toward her but Eric was before them. He took her by the arm and led her back into the hall and up the stairs. On the first landing was an old Flemish chest, like a long, low seat. He, they could see, and yet, unless someone came directly to the foot of the steps and looked up, remain unseen.

"I thought you would never come," he said. "I—All those people—" He shuddered. "I don't mean easily. Crowds frighten me. I don't know what to do, or say. He tried to laugh. After a while his mind began to take in things. They weren't such a bad lot, these people of his father's world. Rather like children, when you beheld them at close range.

"This—Miss Callender," he said suddenly. "Do you—know her?"

She gave a little start. "Yes," she said.

"If she should pass, will you point her out?"

She nodded. Then: "Why?" she asked.

He shrugged his shoulders. He could not betray his father even to her. "I saw her dive this morning," he said, and added: "Is she—nice?"

"Nice? That would depend," she said, "on what you mean by 'nice.' If you mean is she honest and hard-working, I—think she is."

He sat brooding. When he spoke again it was as if to himself.

"A man can't go on forever," he said, "with his heart in a grave..."

HIS FATHER came out of the drawing-room, walking with a quick, light step. He looked young, eager. His eyes lifted, glanced up the stairs to the landing, and were startled.

He said: "Eric? ... Carlys?"

In a great blinding jolt the world went out for Eric. Carlys! The name hung in the air, vibrated there. He felt a hand suddenly gripping his, forcing him back to reality. His father came up. His eyes were bewildered. "I didn't know that you two—"

It was she who answered.

"Ages," she said. "Ages and ages."

His father stood still. And abruptly he looked neither young nor eager.

Under its bronze Eric's face was white. He stared at his father, unable to speak, numb between hard-held grievances and a mounting tenderness.

"In the fall," he heard Carlys Callender saying, "Eric wants to go abroad."

"Eric?" his father echoed. "Abroad?"

"To study," said Carlys Callender, cutting straight. "To paint. He's good."

His father stood speechless a moment.

"Painting? You, Eric?"

Eric nodded.

"How extraordinary!" said his father. "I didn't know, Eric, that you—that you..."

His eyes, wide, mutely appealing, searched Eric's face as if they were seeing him for the first time. "I—didn't—know. I—I never tried to find out!"

HIS FATHER loved him! Clearly Eric saw that. And before that knowledge all the resentment, all the bitterness that he had stored up through the years fell away. He knew a warm emotion, a fierce exultant joy. He wanted to cry out: "It's all right, Dad!" But the habit of years is strong. He didn't cry out. He couldn't.

His father turned and went down the stairs, into the library where it was quiet and deserted.

And suddenly the fingers twisted in Eric's withdrew themselves. Carlys Callender came to her feet.

"After him!" she cried. And gave Eric a little push toward the stairs.

His father was sitting on the bench before the fireplace, under the painting Sargent had done of his mother, and he was looking up at her.

"Do you see the resemblance?" his father asked. He did not turn his head.

Eric stared. And then it came to him—the thing about Carlys Callender that had so disturbed him, that had sent all his memories flocking and all his senses searching that first time he had beheld her. She was like his mother! Gold like her, courage like her, radiance like her! He had the key now to his father, too. His father had not been in love with her, not as Carlys Callender. It had gone deeper, further back, to the memory of a woman whose lovely image, hungered for and sorely missed, she had been able to recall!

Understanding now, Eric put out his hand—touched his father's arm.

"Dad," he said. "Dad, in the gardener's cottage are some things I'd like to show you. Will you come?"

High Blood Pressure can be reduced in many cases and symptoms relieved, says eminent physician

Dr. Frederic Damrau, eminent physician of New York City, says that ALLIMIN Essence of Garlic Parsley Tablets often help to reduce High Blood Pressure, and that the continued use of these tablets at prescribed intervals helps to keep the blood pressure down "by dilating the peripheral capillaries of the body surface, thus lessening the burden upon the heart." This is only one of the beneficial effects offered by the use of these tablets, says Dr. Damrau. To get the full facts, send your name and address, and an extremely interesting booklet of facts and valuable information will be sent you free. Better still, give ALLIMIN Tablets a trial and learn for yourself how much they may help you. ALLIMIN Tablets are tasteless, odorless and sugar-dusted free from dangerous drugs of every kind. Gay Materials Used
To Create Original
Playtime Costumes

By Dorothy Blair

NEVER before have vacation clothes been so fanciful and bright with color, and never have they departed so far from conventional standards in their effort to give the wearer all possible comfort and freedom. Play clothes are now clothes actually designed for play. You can climb the highest, rockiest mountains with never a thought for your clothes; you can lounge about without fear of disarranging careful pleats, and you can dig in the garden to your heart's content and you will make a pretty picture while you're doing it. You can tramp through the countryside in a glorified edition of a tramp's habiliments. When assembling clothes for a real free and easy vacation trip you can leave at home every single garment that restricts freedom of action and holds you down to ladylike decorum of movement. Never before have milady's playtime clothes been so gay and colorful, so loose and easy to wear.

And the materials! Flowered cretonne more brightly colored than ever adorned a sun room. Denim heretofore fashioned into nothing more than stylish workaday overalls. Crinkly cotton crepe which comes in the brightest of hues and launders to perfection. Bed ticking—yes, actually! You see it made into a most workmanlike apron worn by the gardening enthusiast in the center of the picture. All sturdy cottons used for little girl's playtime dresses have now been adopted by grown-up sister for her hours of leisure in the sun and air.

It seems that we are entering upon an era of great practicality, for comfort, wear and convenience are the only hard and fast rules applied to vacation clothes. The vagabond ensembles shown are very new, and highly suitable for free-and-easy motor travelling, gardening, or just plain lounging. Slacks form the foundation of these outfits and they are cut fuller than ever before. In fact, it is difficult to decide whether they are really slacks, or an adaptation of the lounging pyjamas we all were wearing a summer or two ago. Whatever their name, they are comfortable and charming. Shorts, while still favorites, have had to take second place in popularity, which may be just as well, for it takes a handsome pair of legs and slender thighs to wear shorts successfully. Unfortunately nature has not been uniformly kind in this matter.

With slacks go a variety of up-per garments. A 1937 version of the smock is looked upon with particular favor. You can see how effectively these are worn by the carefree girls in our illustration. Select them loose and free-hanging from the shoulders, or belted about the waist.

One vacation outfit featured by stylists is of bright blue denim with loose-fitting slacks and a top made very much like the jumper coats worn by mechanics—even to the patch pockets. Not a very trim or feminine effect, perhaps, but its casual charm and carefree grace grow upon you. A bright scarf folded about the throat, gaudy sandals upon the feet and a print kerchief tied under the chin in peasant fashion complete the ensemble and thus attired you are all set for summer hiking, lounging or trailer traveling.

The feminine gardener no longer dons her oldest house dress, pulls on hubby's fishing hat and sets to work, hoping and praying the neighbors will not observe her digging among the bulbs. Now gardeners welcome unexpected guests, in a summer gardening costume that is picturesque and colorful. Observe madam this summer; slacks protect her legs from scratches and insect bites, heavy-duty sandals cover her feet and take her into the mud-diast reaches of the garden. Her smock, of the same bright color as her cotton slacks, is bound about the collar with guess what?—striped bed ticking! This same material is used to fashion the highly practical gardener's apron she wears tied about her waist. This has as many pockets as a carpenter's overalls, and there's a place for trowels, packets of seeds and all other necessities of gardening. Her scissors dangle from the waistband, firmly attached by a cord. To keep her lily-white skin from being burned by the sun's ardent rays, she wears a shade hat with an enormous brim which serves this practical purpose and also manages to be highly becoming. There is nothing dainty about her gloves, for they are the heavy, gardening kind, but they are attractive, trimmed on the cuffs with the same material as her apron. You see her smiling at you from the center of the picture at left.

The other fair gardener shown combines her plain colored slacks with a brightly printed cotton smock, buttoned down the front and trimly belted. The almost non-existent sleeves leave her arms free to acquire a golden summer tan. A print kerchief, of the same material as her smock, is tied mammy-fashion about her head. She, too, wears sandals, which seem to be the happiest choice for these casual summer costumes.

The traveler shown in the costume sketched on the extreme left is plainly doing her vacationing in the most approved trailer fashion. Her outfit shows us what the feminine traveler-by-trailer will be wearing this summer. Slacks and smock are fashioned of dyed unbleached muslin which comes in gorgeous high shades. A suggestion of peasant influence is shown in the bright yarn embroidery on her fashionably wide belt, which is repeated on the shoulders of her smock. She finds a large shade hat the best protection against the sun, but when actually enroute she will doubtless tie a bandana about her head to keep her coiffure in trim array.

There is a touch of gypsy in the clothes designed for us for our most carefree and casual summer hours, and a lot of the middle European peasant influence which has made such a firm imprint on our spring and summer frocks. The Hawaiian note, too, is shown in the brightness and variety of colors used and in the tropical prints that are employed for many types of play clothes.

It will be a happy experience to buy or (if you are a clever seamstress) make, your summer play clothes. There are new styles for every type, young or old, dark or fair, slender or not so slender. Now is the time to indulge your every whim of color and design, for you will probably never have so fine a chance again to go native in your own back yard, or be a gypsy while vacationing away from home.

New Zest For Family Dinners

THERE may be fortunate women in the world who are so ingenious and resourceful that they are never plagued by the ever-present problem of menu planning. Most of us just simply run out of ideas every once in a while and at the cost of family disapproval have to fall back on the same old combinations of foods used time and time again.

Very often every-day ingredients can be combined in a totally different manner. This is a real triumph of culinary skill, since it puts no strain on the food budget and provides wholesome, nourishing fare which will please every member of the family.

As an example, let us consider the meat loaf. This homely but always welcome food can be prepared in a variety of ways and be served with equal success, either hot or cold. It falls in the category of dishes easily and quickly prepared, and for that reason is regarded highly by the housewife who wishes to spend leisurely hours free from cooking cares.

Illustrated to the right is a new version of this old favorite. It makes cooking news because it contains in its ingredients one of our old breakfast standbys, cornflakes, which give it a delicious flavor and fine texture.

Ham Loaf

- 2 eggs
- 1 cup milk
- 1 pound ground smoked ham
- ½ pound ground lean pork
- ½ pound ground veal
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons chopped green pepper

2 cups cornflake crumbs
Beat eggs slightly; add milk and remainder of ingredients. Mix thoroughly. Fill a long, narrow cloth bag with the mixture; tie with a string and boil about one hour in water to cover. This will make eight servings.

This loaf may also be baked in a loaf pan in a moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about one hour. If the loaf is chilled it can be cut in thin slices for sandwiches, cold meat platters, etc.

Clever cooks have promoted cornflakes from a breakfast food to an every-meal necessity, since it combines so well with many ingredients in fashioning delicious dishes. As was shown in last week's page, it can be used in a variety of desserts to great advantage. When the flakes are crumbled—the rolling pin does this job nicely—they serve as a delicious coating for fried foods, such as chops or oysters, especially when used with an egg batter. Try this new cooking wrinkle soon—you'll like it. And since cornflakes are so rich in nourishment, they can't appear in the menu in too many forms for the sake of your family's health.

Will Keep Hair Gleaming

NOW that hats have become crownless and brims turn back or flare up in dramatic fashion, milady's hair is more in the spotlight than ever before. The soft, feminine little curls we are wearing cannot be shown off to best advantage unless the hair is lustrous and lovely.

Special summer care is always necessary for the tresses, because of the bad effect of sun, wind and salt water. The same rays that give the skin a golden, healthful tan tend to make the scalp and hair dry and lifeless. A head covering of some kind (and what a delightful variety there is to choose from!) should be worn while sunning yourself or disporting in the open, especially if the sun is particularly strong. And while bathing caps afford some protection from salt water, a little is bound to seep in and dampen the hair, leaving it sticky and dull looking. For this reason, shampoos should be frequent and painstaking if the hair is to show off to best advantage.

Even the most beautiful hair profits from the aids to nature that benevolent beauticians have devised. Blonde hair particularly can be improved by a famous preparation which adds golden highlights to its fair coloring. This is definitely not a dye or bleach, since it only enhances the natural hue and gives it a gleaming, lustrous appearance. A few drops of this liquid preparation in the rinse water is all that is necessary, and because it has a healthful action on the hair it can be used after every shampoo with highly satisfactory results. The possessor of blonde hair is a fortunate individual, for everyone admires the beauty of the various shades, from palest ash to gleaming gold. It must have life and sheen, however, to be truly handsome, and if it does not possess this naturally, this special rinse should be applied.

Darker shades of brown hair

also are improved by the same method, appearing more colorful and vivid immediately.

Fastidious care of the hair is a year-around necessity, but never is this so important as during the summer months when all of us wish to look our best.

Claire Trevor's Beautiful Blonde Hair Is Enhanced By Golden Highlights.

Science Wages War On Pests

ALL OF US have the problem at some time or other of coping with unexpected guests who appear when least desired and show every sign of making their stay a pretty permanent affair. When they are out-of-town relatives, or hubby's fellow lodge members, all the lady of the house can do is to be her most charming self and hope to heaven that they'll move on sooner or later. Another type of unwanted guest needs more drastic treatment, and steps should be taken toward his extermination the moment he puts in an appearance.

Don't be alarmed—it's not mass murder we are advocating at all, but just an intelligent handling of the problem of insect invasion. Just as sure as summer comes around there are troubling signs of the advent of creeping, crawling and flying pests who will make every effort to establish themselves as permanent fixtures in the household if they are not dealt with from the first.

Fortunately science has come to the aid of the housewife in this matter, and has devised simple and easily applied methods of insect eradication. One of the most effective comes in powder form in a can with a sifter top, and it is sure death to any luckless insect with which it comes in contact. Though the effect of this type of eradicator is deadly to all kinds of household pests, it is absolutely harmless to animals or humans, so it can be used inside the house or in the garden or chicken house with confidence.

Public enemy number one in the garden is the sinister aphid who loves to feast on the loveliest roses. Its presence blights many a flower and unless checked at the very start of its invasion, the aphid and his little brothers and sisters will take over your garden for their own, and all your devoted labors in the early spring will have been for naught. But, if at the first sign of these ugly little pests clinging to the stems and buds of your flowers you get busy with the can of insect powder, the warfare will soon be over and the victory yours.

Then there is that busy little disturber of the peace, the mosquito. If you would like the prospect of long summer evenings spent on the porch, and you do not like the idea of being chewed to pieces while you are communing with nature, pour some of this same insect eradicator in powder form into a receptacle and burn it. All you will hear of the mosquitoes will be their distant hum as they hurriedly leave for less dangerous quarters.

If you are a foresighted traveler, you will include in your list of vacation necessities a can of insect powder, for even the most spotless vacation camps very often harbor hordes of undesirable invaders. They will take possession of your food, they will creep into your bed, and they will hum and buzz and crawl around and do everything in their power to spoil your hours of summer pleasure and relaxation unless you are prepared in advance to take steps against them. It is fortunate that one type of eradicator spells sure, speedy death to practically every member of the insect world, for you never know what kind of an annoying pest you will encounter next on your travels.

It's The Bait That Catches Yellowtail!

One Magic Word And Fishermen Go Wild!

By Richard W. Emery

OLD CAP ANDERSON peers from the pilot house like a watchdog from a kennel. When he peers like that, he's looking for only one thing in the watery world around his dear boat the Lady Lou.

He's looking for the first little splash away out on the blue ocean which will betray the beginning of the year's big-game fishing season.

The Lady Lou chugs along under him at her usual seven knots. The swells are lazy, with just a crinkle on top. Above the swirl of smoke from the Lady's black exhaust pipe three sea gulls flap hopefully. They are hungry; small fry are hard to catch in the early months.

Old Cap Anderson scowls over the tiller wheel. He is just one of a hundred scowling skippers of sport fishing boats cruising along the Pacific coast today, all looking for the same thing. Their boats are grimy sisters of the Lady Lou. On all the boats, just as on Cap Anderson's dear old scow, there are passengers with hope blooming like desert wildflowers in their mackinawed bosoms.

They are the seekers of game sea fish. They are the season's first crop of optimists. To the last man they believe that their scowling skipper will sooner or later yell from the pilot house a signal for pandemonium:

"Yellowtail!"

They can't help being like that any more than skippers like Cap Anderson can help yelling that magic word when they see, out on their ocean playground, a swirling little patch of water marking the presence of a big game fish. Their enthusiasm is a part of late winter and earliest Spring, like the bursting of buds on Pacific Coast willow trees. And this year, particularly, they are off to an early optimism.

"This time last year," says Cap Anderson in his pilot house, "we had the doggonedest early run of yellowtail I ever saw. They were out here thicker'n sand fleas."

Back by the bait tank the pay customers are tinkering with blue-steel leaders and fish hooks. They can't help it; it's part of the day's outing. They soak their new lines. They stand by the tank and admire the "racehorse" sardines even as gentlemen might sit at a night club and admire the dancers of a floor show.

"What beautiful sardines," they murmur.

Beautiful sardines are necessary to the success of the day's fishing. Sardines that are not beautiful are no good for bait. A beautiful sardine, as Cap Anderson gladly would explain, is a blonde sardine with a perfect complexion, a clear eye and a lot of pep. Tuna and yellowtail will go into back somersaults of joy at sight of such beautiful bait.

An unbeautiful sardine is one which has a shopworn look, a blemish here and there from bumping the bait tank, and a jaded eye from lying too long near a harbor. To be a "racehorse," a sardine must attain the length of six inches or more. A sports fisherman on the Pacific Coast would rather have a beautiful racehorse sardine than a whale.

Because of last year's wonderful early-season run of yellowtail, which broke all coast records and spread the flavor of frying fish far and wide over 240,000 square miles of the West, the ocean fishermen are confident of an early catch this year, too. Last year's run came unexpectedly. Commercial fishermen began to catch yellowtail on 400-foot rock cod lines weighted with window weights. Returning to port, the commercial fishers spread the news. Within a week, every launch and tugboat, rowboat, whaleboat, skiff and sailboat, motor cruiser, yacht and canoe was doing service on the fishing grounds. The yellowtail catch in the following three weeks astounded old timers of the waterfront.

Consider what it would be like to watch Cap Anderson and his hopeful anglers discover the season's first school of "yellows." What cold-blooded landsman could see that drama of the fishboat without feeling steam shoot through his clammy arteries?

Old Cap Anderson strains his eyes at something in the distance. He sees three or four gulls playing merry-go-round over a wave. He knows the gulls have found something to eat. It may be a school of frenzied little fish trying to jump out of their skins to escape a bunch of big-jawed bullies with fins as long as butcher knives.

Cap Anderson stares through binoculars. He calls Mike. Mike stares. Mike goes back to the bait tank. When the Lady Lou approaches the place where the birds are wheeling, Mike throws out a handful of sardines. The Lady Lou swings in a circle. The cash customers see that something is happening. They clutch their fishing rods and scramble for stray sardines.

Out where the flung sardines have fallen, the powerful tail of a big game fish thrashes at the surface. The spot is marked by a swirl about a yard wide.

"Yellow-TAIL!"

The middle-aged angler with the coffee already is swinging a beautiful racehorse sardine on a five-foot wire leader. He whips the rod with full-arm action—like a muleskinner wielding a blacksnake.

The sardine gets the ride of a lifetime, a sky-high arc which ends in the jaws of a big fish.

"Jumpin' Jeppers!" exclaims the angler. The rod bends. Jeppers slips on the wet deck, regains balance, grunts loudly, and another fisherman accidentally knocks Jeppers' hat off. The reel still whirs. Jeppers remembers that the reel has a tricky little brake attachment for times like this.

"Wait! Wait!" he calls to his fish. He twists the brake. The rod bends sharply. Jeppers gasps. He slips again. The reel gets out of control for a moment and develops a threat of tangle.

"Wait," says Jeppers, struggling left-handed with the rod and picking at loops. He almost gets his fingers nipped when the reel spins again. He steps on a sardine. Four hundred feet of line sags between Jeppers and his finny opponent. The Lady Lou is rocking like a cradle. Fishing rods and fishing lines are swinging overhead. Sardines whizz past each other in mid-air. Through it all, overcoming obstacle by obstacle, grimly struggles Jeppers, the angler from Pill Junction, on this first great day of big game fishing season. He wheezes and he puffs. His neck turns pink and his face glistens. He moans with muscle cramps which are spreading over his back, his legs, his shoulders and his wrists.

His fingers on the reel handle are turning nervelessly. Every time the line goes hurrying out again through the slipping clutch, Jeppers groans.

"There he goes," he says, two or three times. "Nope! I gottum! Whoa!"

Mike, the deckhand, armed with a gaff which looks like a shepherd's crook, tries to get a look at Jeppers' fish, down through the clear salt water.

"Don't give him any line now," says Mike. "Keep him coming. Keep his head up. Here he comes. Hold it!"

Hanging by his left knee to the gunwale, Mike yanks with the gaff. The line goes slack. Mike hoists aboard a struggling silvery and golden fish weighing 20 pounds. The broad tail-fin which belabors the deck is bright yellow.

"Wow," says Jeppers of Pill Junction, who has just caught the first yellowtail of the season. He opens and shuts his cramped hands. He sinks to a seat, dreaming momentarily of his triumphant return to Pill Junction. He dreams of his wife's delight at the beautiful fish; he dreams of the moment when, napkin under chin, he will spear the first big bite of fried yellowtail and pop it into his mouth. Mr. Jeppers smiles, there on the stern of the grimy Lady Lou, while other fishermen are stumbling over his boots.

Something cold and wet whacks Mr. Jeppers across the cheek. It is a sardine, a beautiful wriggly racehorse sardine which a fisherman has swung.

"Excuse me," says a voice.

"Don't mention it," mumbles Mr. Jeppers. He looks as if he has just been through a dog fight.

In his sunny cabin old Cap Anderson pauses between bites from a tuna sandwich. He jerks his big right thumb back at Jeppers and the big yellowtail on the deck.

"You can talk about tuna fishing," says Cap Anderson, "but for me, just give me yellowtail fishing. Tuna makes you work yourself to death. You can have a little fun when you catch yellows. Yeah, you can just take it easy. All you gotta have is the right kind of bait—nice blonde sardines. Yeah!"
